Mrs. Billie Brunjes and solar heat . . . taking advantage of nature

Sun's power to help heat home of Cole Camp family

By BILL ZIERES
Staff Writer

COLE CAMP — The next winter may be a little easier to get through for Mrs. Billie Brunjes and her five children living in their four-room house at 302 South Pine here.

The family home is the recipient of a solar heating system built along the building's south wall and piped into its heating system.

The solar system was installed last week by Ken Johnson and Frank Potkul of the West Central Missouri Rural Development Corp., in Appleton City. The corporation is a community action agency providing social, employment and "weatherizing" services for low-income families.

Mrs. Brunjes' home was chosen for the project because it had been winterized by the corporation within a year before the solar system was installed, and she also fell within the economic guidelines for the system.

Johnson, director of planning for the Appleton City corporation, said the system is "purely auxiliary" and is designed to reduce the total fuel consumption for heating from between 30 to 50 per cent.

The solar system consists of two panels mounted to the home's outside wall. Each panel is sealed in plastic and contains corrugated tin painted black. The sun's rays heat the tin, warm air is then blown from the tin with an electric fan through a series of baffles and channels and pumped into the central heating system in the house.

Johnson said the tin reaches temperatures as high as 160 degrees when it is heated by the sun regardless of the outside temperatures. The system is capable of generating 42,000 BTUs an hour. Total operating cost of the solar heating system alone will run about $1 a month to operate the electric fan, Johnson said.

The system was designed by the Domestic Technology Institute, Evergreen, Colo., and cost only $200 in materials, Johnson said.

Mrs. Brunjes said she is pleased with the system even though she's had it only a short time.

"I just wish I had had it in January during the real cold weather," she said. During January and December, she said she used about 700 gallons of LP gas to heat her home.

The frame around the heat-absorbing panels will be painted to match the house, she said. "It will look just like a big window then," Mrs. Brunjes added.

She said she has had several phone calls and people stop while driving by to question her about the system. However, she said that most are more interested in the cost than anything else.

Although spring is not here yet, Mrs. Brunjes admits that her new heater's real test won't come until next winter.

Coup alleged

Amin goes on rampage

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — President Idi Amin has launched a nationwide massacre of two predominantly Christian tribes in Uganda, a group of 22 refugees claimed today after arriving in neighboring Tanzania.

In Kampala, Uganda's capital, Amin told reporters he had put down a coup that was to include an airborne landing by paratroopers from the United States, Britain or Israel.

The refugees in Tanzania said students, police, soldiers and civil servants belonging to the northern Acholi and Langi tribes were being rounded up and "liquidated" to purge the government apparatus of members of the tribes.

Western diplomatic sources in Nairobi, Kenya, said shooting was heard for 30 minutes Tuesday evening in Kampala' Mugire prison, where the Langi and Acholi detainees were reportedly being held.

Some refugee reports put the number of persons killed in the East African country's latest bloodletting at more than 1,000.

Confirmation of the refugees' reports was not available. But Amnesty International estimates that Amin's forces have killed between 50,000 and 300,000 persons since he seized power six years ago.

The sources said Amin believes the two tribes, in a plot masterminded by former President Milton Obote, were out to overthrow him. Obote, whom Amin ousted from power in a coup and who now lives in Tanzania, is a member of the Langi tribe.

Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum, who was killed a week ago after he was arrested for alleged complicity in the coup attempt, was an Acholi. Amin is a member of the minority Moslem Kakwa tribe.

In Kampala, Amin said the Obote-led plot was to have begun with the assassination of Ugandan leaders and followed by an airborne landing of paratroopers from the United States, Britain or Israel. He gave no further details.

Amin also confirmed there had been shooting in Kampala on Tuesday, but he gave no details. He also denied reports that he personally killed Bishop Luwum. He said he only learned of the deaths while he was preparing plans for an African, Caribbean and Pacific Group conference which opened today in Kampala.

Correspondents also met with Maj. Moses, the driver of the car in which Archbishop Luwum and two government ministers supposedly died last week after they were arrested for alleged complicit in the plot.

Hunt released from prison, evades press

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — E. Howard Hunt was released from federal prison today after serving 32 months for his role as a recruiter and lookout in the Watergate burglary. He slipped away without comment.

An official of the 475-inmate federal minimum security prison on this military base in the Florida panhandle emerged from the main gate at 6 a.m. to read a statement to reporters who had waited through the night.

"Mr. E. Howard Hunt was released from a federal prison camp at Eglin Air Force Base this morning," the official said. "Mr. Hunt, at all times, conducted himself as a gentleman. Mr. Hunt stated prior to his release he did not wish to be interviewed at this time and will advise the news media as to his availability at a later date."

Seconds after reading the statement, a laundry truck sped out the main gate and reporters gave chase in cars. However, they lost the truck about a mile from the prison gate. Hunt had worked in the prison laundry.

He was booked on a Southern Airlines flight leaving the local airport at 6:30 a.m.

Hermann likes Fair price hike

The Missouri Senate Agriculture Committee's unanimous approval Tuesday of a bill to increase the admission price at the Missouri State Fair from $1 to $1.50 per person was endorsed Wednesday by Fair Director Jerry Hermann.

"It's something that's definitely been needed," Hermann said. "A dollar today isn't worth near as much as it was in 1969 (when the last admission rate increase took effect)."

The bill, sponsored by State Sen. John Ryan, now goes to the Senate for consideration. It must be passed by the Senate, the House of Representatives and signed by Gov. Joseph Teasdale before it can take effect. Last year, a similar proposal was initiated in the House by Rep. James Mathewson. It passed in the House but was defeated in the Senate.

This year, Hermann said, Mathewson has agreed to lead efforts to pass the bill in the House if the Senate approves it. Hermann, who testified before the Senate Agriculture Committee Tuesday, said he is more optimistic this year about the bill's chances for passage in both houses of the legislature.

Chillicothe educator to take Finley's job

C. Howard Jones, 33, currently assistant superintendent of schools at Chillicothe, Mo., will succeed Dr. Earl Finley as assistant superintendent of the Sedalia school system in charge of certified personnel and curriculum effective July 1, Superintendent of Schools Kem Keithly announced Wednesday.

Jones was selected by the Sedalia school board at its Feb. 15 meeting from a final list of three applicants. A total of 30 persons, including three current employes of the Sedalia school system, applied for the position. The initial screening of applicants was performed by Keithly and John Thomas, assistant superintendent in charge of elementary education.

Jones, a native of Mt. Vernon, Mo., began his education career as an art teacher and elementary art supervisor for the Raytown, Mo., school system. He later served as an elementary principal in the North Kansas City school system four years before moving to Chillicothe, where he initially was director of elementary education. In 1974, he was promoted to assistant superintendent of the school system.

In addition to his personnel and curriculum duties, Jones will also assist in budget preparation and student personnel supervision. While in Chillicothe, Keithly noted, Jones has been involved with the Selection Research Incorporated teacher-hiring process. Under this format, standardized questions are asked of all applicants for teaching and administrative positions. These questions are geared toward the individuality of a particular school system and are formulated on the basis of information about the district provided to officials who operate this service.

House subcommittee hearings

Firm denies natural gas withheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texaco official today denied that his company is withholding natural gas and claimed such charges are undercutting the effort to develop a sound national energy policy.

Richard B. Palmer, senior vice president in charge of Texaco's Western Hemisphere operations, told a House commerce subcommittee that the country only has a 10-year supply of natural gas remaining.

He denied allegations made by committee investigators on Tuesday that Texaco was withholding from production 500 billion cubic feet of natural gas in two Gulf of Mexico fields for solely economic reasons.

Meanwhile, the subcommittee issued another report asserting that Gulf Oil Corp. violated federal law in failing to deliver 625 million cubic feet of natural gas per day to Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., a pipeline system. But the chairman of Gulf denied it, and said his firm is doing everything humanly possible to meet the terms of its Texas Eastern contract.

Texaco's Palmer claimed that "development of sound policies to meet the nation's energy needs has been set back by the unfounded charges of a few uninformed critics who claim that natural gas producers are withholding production of reserves underlying the Gulf of Mexico."

The Texaco official said that tapping its Gulf of Mexico reserve prematurely would amount to a "drain-America-now policy."

Subcommittee chairman John Moss, D-Calif., retorted, "I know of no one advocating a policy of 'drain-America-now.' This is nothing but sloganeering."

The subcommittee report on Gulf Oil criticized the Federal Power Commission's handling of the Gulf-Eastern case, claiming consumers "cannot rely on" the FPC to protect their interests.

The report claimed that the FPC failed to require Gulf to deliver the gas to Texas Eastern in line with contract obligations between the huge energy company and the gas distribution firm.

Bothwell Hospital bond sale also gets green light

Council approves replacement of sewer line near school

By DAN POTTER
Staff Writer

Seeking a permanent solution to the gasoline fume problem that has plagued Mark Twain Elementary School, the City Council voted Tuesday night to pay General Contractors Inc. "not more than $8,000" to replace a sewer line on the west side of the school.

The council awarded the contract to the Sedalia firm without seeking other bids because "the emergency situation required immediate action," Mayor Allen Hawkins explained.

"Anytime the welfare and safety of citizens is involved," said Hawkins, "the council can award a contract in this manner."

The school was closed briefly Feb. 11, all day Feb. 14, last Thursday and Friday because of gasoline fumes entering the school through the 80- to 90-year-old sewer system.

The leak in a gasoline pump at Freese Dairy, 100 South Prospect, that forced the school closing, has been fixed.

But Superintendent of Schools Kem Keithly expressed concern that any additional leaks would cause more school closings, "if the leaking sewer is not replaced."

The replacement of the 250-foot sewer line and another safety measure at Freese Dairy will insure the fume problem will not recur, Keithly said.

Keithly said a hole will be drilled south of the dairy's gasoline tank to collect gas, should another leak appear.

The sewer line is being by-passed until the new line can be laid.

In other action Tuesday night, the council approved the sale of $600,000 in revenue bonds to finance improvements at Bothwell Hospital, appointed a new Civil Defense director for the county and reversed a rezoning denial recommendation by the city Planning and Zoning Commission.

Patients at Bothwell Hospital will pay an additional $2 per day "probably" by June 1, to finance improvements to three areas at the hospital.

The hospital's present dietary facilities will be moved and upgraded at a cost of $412,000, reported hospital Board of Trustees President C. J. "Neil" Chapman.

Another $209,000 will be spent to improve and move the laundry facilities into the space now occupied by the dietary section and the obstetrics section will be remodeled at a cost of $44,000.

The total cost of the three improvements is $665,000, but the funding of depreciated accounts will pay for the $65,000 not covered by the bond sales, Chapman reported.

The bond required council approval, but not a vote of the public because no tax money is involved.

The new room rates, it was reported, will be $65 per day for a semi-private room and $68 daily for a private room. The increases are expected to take effect around March 1, as soon as the bonds are sold.

Richard Orendorff, 509 East 15th, was appointed as the new Pettis County Civil Defense director during the council's executive session.

Voting on the appointment of such officials is required by state law to be held in open, public meetings, not in closed meetings, such as the council's executive session.

Third Ward Democrat Carl Franklin said, "It was an oversight not to confirm him (Orendorff) in the open meeting."

Sedalia has been without a Civil Defense director since Feb. 7, when Harold Mitchell resigned the post because he did not have enough time to devote to the job. It was not known what Orendorff's occupation is.

In an unusual move, the council overrode a Planning and Zoning Commission recommendation that Charles F. Paxton, 200 East 24th, not be allowed to operate a commercial business at that address.

Six members of the council voted unanimously to over-ride the action. Absent were Second Ward Democrat Stanley Holt and First Ward Republican Jack Kniest.

"That is the first time I have ever seen the council vote to over-ride" a zoning recommendation, Franklin observed. When Paxton applied for the rezoning from R-1 (single family) to C-3

Farmer's request being considered

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A northwest Missouri farmer's request that he be allowed to hunt on his own land without a permit even if he doesn't live on that land has been taken under advisement by the state Conservation Commission.

Lucien Smith of Rock Port, armed with petitions signed by 272 persons in the northwest Missouri counties of Atchison, Nodaway, Holt and Andrew, asked the commission on Tuesday to change its regulation which allows farmers to hunt on their own land without a $7.50 permit only if they live on that land.

"In 22 years I've seen an awful lot of brush and woodland destroyed," Smith told the commissioners. "The reason it is a problem is because hunters trespass and the game commission tells us we're doing things wrong. The best way to get rid of it (the problem), is to destroy it (the land)."

Smith has already cleared trees from about half of a 200-acre strip of land along the Missouri River near the Iowa border with the use of a recently purchased $30,000 bulldozer. He said he would preserve the land as a wildlife habitat if the state would change its regulation.

Until two years ago, the local conservation agent allowed Smith to hunt on the land without a license. But when some of Smith's neighbors complained that he was received special treatment, the agency told Smith he would have to purchase a license because he did not live on the property.

Burt Bakke of Macon joined Smith before the commission and presented an additional 48 signatures from persons in Macon and Adair counties.

Bakke said the commission should either require everyone or no one to buy the permits whether they live on the land or not.

Commission Chairman Bob Talbot told the two men the primary purpose of the agency is to conserve the state's wildlife resources.

"An equitable solution is something we all want," Talbot said. "We're thinking with you, not against you. Maybe we've missed something, we're not perfect."

Ousted mayor won't fight removal

BETHANY, Mo. (AP) — Mayor Neal Bullock said Tuesday night he has no plans to fight his removal from office for violating the state nepotism law by allegedly engineering the rehiring of his son as a city police officer.

The ouster order came earlier in the day from Judge J. Morgan Donelson of Harrison County Circuit Court, who conducted removal proceedings last month.

Bullock, who was elected mayor in April, said he would abide by the judge's decision. He said he was relieved to have the months-long battle over with and did not intend to fight the matter further.

"It's hard on him, but he's taking it like a man," Mrs. Bullock said.

Bullock said he would be eligible to run for mayor again in the April elections, but he did not plan to do so despite encouragment from some residents of this northwest Missouri community.

"Under the circumstances, I don't care to be mayor," Bullock said.

The ouster proceedings were initiated by Jack C. Bauer, who was prosecuting attorney at the time and acted as special prosecutor in the ouster. He offered Bullock the option of resigning late last year but the mayor vowed to fight the nepotism charge.

The charge concerned Bullock's son, Gary, who served as a Bethany policeman until he was elected town marshal in April 1974. The younger Bullock did not seek re-election in 1976 and sought to return to the police force.

He returned to the department last April, a short time after his father took over as mayor, but was later placed on suspension by the city pending a legal determination of his status. There was a question at the time whether he had resigned in 1974 and whether he needed to be reappointed.

Plane crash kills 5

SPRINGDALE, Ark. (AP) — Five Fort Worth, Texas residents were killed Tuesday when their twin-engine plane crashed here, police said.

The victims were identified by Police Chief Bob Berry as James L. Ward, 35; Jimmy Fulkerson, 35; Reed Yowell, 34; Fabe Ingram Jr., 42, and Nancy Barrett, 30.

Berry said the Piper Navajo was flying from Fort Worth to St. Louis. He said the plane left Fort Worth shortly after 3 p.m., and the crash occurred at about 5:10 p.m.

Berry said witnesses reported that the plane exploded in midair.

One resident reported hearing three explosions before the plane struck the ground.

He said three of the bodies were found in the plane wreckage. One body fell through the roof of a building just south of the wreckage site, and the fifth body hit the side of the same building.

He said the plane crashed about 100 yards from several houses. No one on the ground was injured, and no property was damaged.

First reports said the crash may have been caused by a mid-air collision, but Berry said investigators determined that just one aircraft was involved.

The plane wreckage was found near the intersection of U.S. 71 and Arkansas 264. Debris from the wreckage was found as far as two miles from the main part of the wreckage.

Turbulent winds buffeted the area, and police said the winds may have caused the crash.

The Federal Aviation Administration has taken charge of the investigation.

The Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) was begun in England in 1652 by George Fox.

Q — I would like to know what either a high school student or someone who is not yet 21 can use for identification purposes when writing a check other than a driver's license. The new check-cashing guidelines issued by the prosecuting attorney's office require two forms of identification, yet most people under 21 have only a driver's license. Persons under 21 are not eligible to apply for the state identifications cards issued through the Department of Motor Vehicle Registration. K.L.C.

A — Drivers licenses, credit cards, college and high school identification cards, check-cashing cards (issued by at least one bank here) and military identifications are all considered acceptable, according to Prosecuting Attorney Mark Kempton.

Social Security and birth registration cards issued by the state and federal governments are not, it has been previously reported, because they can be obtained through the mail with any name by anyone other than the person applying.

Persons under 21 are not eligible for the state identification cards issued by the license bureau, according to Mrs. Lorraine Jackson, fee agent here, because the cards are primarily designed for liquor purchases. Persons under 21 cannot purchase alcoholic beverages in Missouri.

Q — I would like to know how the Sedalia Planning and Zoning Commission passed out the maps of plans for the next 25 years. We never received a copy and neither did the people I work with. Where can I obtain one? A.M.

A — George Berenyi, Planning and Zoning Commission chairman, said local Boy Scouts are distributing some 9,500 four-color "sketch-sheets" to Sedalia residents. The sheets, which include a summary of the city's 25-year development plan and a full-sized land use map, are being distributed on weekends, he said, noting that weather hampered the distribution during recent weeks.

The scouts are delivering the information packets on a time-permitting basis and have divided delivery areas according to election precincts in the city. Anyone not receiving one of the packets may obtain one from the office of Industrial Development Director James Hamm at the Municipal Building, Berenyi said.

Chemists find way to neutralize poison

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Two chemists working for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service have discovered a way to remove deadly poison from the federal government's stockpile of Agent Orange, a defoliant used in the Vietnam War, according to the Portland office of the Department of Interior.

Chemists David Stallings and Jim Huckins, working in the Fish and Wildlife Service fish pesticide laboratory in Columbia, Mo., found that they could use coconut charcoal filters to remove TCDD, also known as dioxin, one of the most toxic substances known to man.

The Interior Department said more than two million gallons of the defoliant, valued at $40 million and stockpiled in Gulfport, Miss., and in the open sea near Johnson Island in the Pacific, can be salvaged.

The government use of Agent Orange was stopped when the chemical was suspected as a cause of birth defects in Vietnamese children.

Until recently, Agent Orange, the code name for the herbicide T,4,5-T, was stored in Northeastern Oregon.

A form of the herbicide which contains much less dioxin than Agent Orange is used in some Oregon forests and traces of dioxin reportedly were found in the milk of mothers in the Oregon coastal mountains.

The two fish and wildlife chemists say they were able to remove more than 99 per cent of dioxin from Agent Orange when it filtered through a column of coconut charcoal heated to 100 degrees centigrade.

The Interior Department in Portland said the patented method may have applications in commercial manufacturing which could result in safer herbicides and industrial chemicals.

Ground beef prices reach 8-month high

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri shoppers this week are paying the highest prices for ground beef since June 1, a Farm Bureau shoppers' guide indicates.

Ground beef moved up to 80 cents a pound, two cents higher than last week's average and its highest mark in 37 weeks, according to the weekly survey of statewide supermarkets.

Coffee prices across the state continued to rise, although at a less rapid pace than in past weeks. A one-pound can of coffee moved up two cents to $3.08, the survey says.

Pork prices eased the burden on the consumer somewhat, however, as the five major pork cuts dropped 11 cents from last week. Pork steak dropped a nickel to $1.08 a pound, butt portions dropped three cents to $1 a pound and shank protions were off two cents to 90 cents a pound.

Chicken prices were up three cents over last week. Whole fryers were gauged at 54 cents per pound, and cut chickens moved to 62 cents a pound.

Beef prices were mixed, with arm roast moving up seven cents to $1.14 a pound and round steak dropping six cents from last week to $1.40 per pound.

For the second successive week, all sizes of eggs dropped in price. Grade "A" Extra Large and Grade "A" Medium eggs each dropped four cents a dozen to 94 cents and 86 cents per dozen, respectively.

A 10-pound bag of red potatoes rose four cents to $1.37 this week, the survey indicates.

Lester Dittmer Smithton, recently was elected to the board of directors of the Missouri Cattlemen's Association at the group's annual convention at Lake of the Ozarks. As a director, Dittmer will represent cattlemen and beef producers in the central Missouri area.

Ashford to head initiative drive

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — John Ashford, who directed the senatorial campaign for the late U.S. Rep. Jerry Litton, was named Tuesday as the operations director for the statewide initiative petition campaign seeking to increase the state's gasoline tax.

He is the husband of Carolyn Ashford, who was recently appointed by Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale to direct the Department of Natural Resources.

Jerry W. Venters, campaign director for the Missouri Transportation and Development Council's Education Committee, announced Ashford's appointment.

Supporters of the petition drive hope to increase the state's fuel tax from seven cents per gallon to 10 cents.

Fire damage at $100,000 in Jeff City

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Most units of the Jefferson City fire department plus several from a Cole County volunteer group were called out Tuesday night to battle blaze in an apartment complex under construction.

No one was injured in the blaze, which destroyed the project. Damage was estimated by the builder at $100,000.

Firemen said the 20-unit complex was engulfed in flames when they arrived and strong, gusty winds made it difficult to contain. It took about an hour to bring the blaze under control.

Embers from the blaze set fire to the roof of a nearby residence, but that fire was quickly extinguished.

Fire officials said they were unsure how the blaze started. They said the state fire marshal would be called in to investigate.

Search called off for boy in Atchison

ATCHISON, Kan. (AP) — Authorities have called off the organized search for 4-year-old Jeremy Coots, saying they are almost certain he drowned last Friday in the Missouri River, 400 yards from a babysitter's home.

They arrived at the conclusion Tuesday after a specially-trained search and rescue dog led them, on several occasions, to a spot along the rushing, ice-clogged river.

Tom Kazo of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., the owner and trainer of the dog, said after checking the dog's reliability several times, he is sure the nearly-deaf boy walked down a ravine from the house to the river and probably fell in.

Atchison County Sheriff Ernie Hansen announced Tuesday night he was shutting down the official search but would, on his own, follow any new leads if they develop in the next few days.

Hansen said Kazo has agreed to stay in Atchison and assist, at least until "something positive develops in the next couple of days or we just quit altogether."

After issuing a statement, Hansen went to inform the parents, Mrs. and Mrs. Richard Coots. She is nine months pregnant.

Hansen said the boy was playing with a playmate, Jimmy Reynolds, 4, son of the babysitter, Mrs. Richard Reynolds, while his parents were working in nearby Atchison.

The boys were playing in the backyard, which drops off gradually in small cliffs to the river below, when the Reynolds boy went inside and told his mother Jeremy had gone over the hill toward the river.

☆ Educator

Jones received his bachelor's degree in education, majoring in art and industrial education, from Southwest Missouri State University, Springfield, in 1964. He received his master's degree in educational administration from Central Missouri State University, Warrensburg, in 1968 and is scheduled to receive his education specialist degree from CMSU this summer. He is also working on a doctorate in education frm the University of Missouri, Columbia, which he expects to receive in 1978.He also has completed graduate work at the University of Oslo, Norway.

Jones and his wife, Donna, who also teaches, have two children, Stacy, age 9, and Chris, 6. They plan to move to Sedalia in June.

Keithly Wednesday said "the district is very fortunate to have an educator of Mr. Jones' caliber join our system. We are all looking forward to working with him and receiving the benefit of his background and experience."

Woman dies after fire flares through Bethany

BETHANY, Mo. (AP) — An elderly woman was missing and presumed dead today in a predawn fire that flared through the Bethany business district, destroying a three-story building housing apartments and shops.

Other residents of the apartments escaped without injury. One of them was an elderly man who climbed from this third-floor apartment on a rope he kept for that purpose. Another was a young man who escaped from his third-floor apartment on a ladder extended from a cable television truck.

Howard Smith, who climbed from his apartment to an adjoining building on a rope, said he heard the missing woman screaming for help but firemen were unable to reach her.

The fire broke out about 3 a.m. and was reported under control six hours later. Cause was not determined and there was no estimate of damage.

An orange glow filled the sky and attracted many of the northwest Missouri community's 3,000 residents to the downtown district.

The blaze reportedly erupted in the basement or at the rear of the Nichols Building, a three-story structure just off the southwest corner of the town square. The portion of the building housing seven apartments on the upper floors and Barker's Hardware and the Easton Floral Shop on the first floor was destroyed. Another section of the building that housed a hotel and tax office suffered smoke damage.

There was also extensive damage from fire, smoke and water to the adjoining building that houses the B&B Printing and Engraving Co. Authorities said the blaze also damaged an adjoining building that housed a law office and accounting firm.

The fire was battled by two units from Bethany, one from Albany and another from Coffey.

The lengthy battle created a temporary shortage in the town's water supply and schools were closed for the day.

Damage mostly minor from high winds here

Damage from the heavy winds which blew across Sedalia in the early morning hours Wednesday was scattered and light.

The heaviest damage was done at Furnell Lumber Co., about six miles south of town on Highway 65. A 40-by-20 foot section of roofing over a porch-patio area was blown off and scattered in a field just north of the company's warehouse. Also damaged by flying debris were about 200 fiberglass bathtubs which were being stored outside. No estimate was made for the damage.

A hog house was also reportedly blown onto Highway 50 about two miles east of town but did not damage any vehicles.

There were several reports of fallen trees and damaged buildings around the city. A $200 shed was destroyed by the wind at the Kerr-McGee Service Station, 2801 West Broadway, and another garage at 1617 East 16th was heavily damaged.

A large metal sign at Don's Di.e Shop and Holiday Liquors, 3312 South Highway 65, was blown from the building's roof around 4 a.m. Wednesday.

Despite an early morning thunderstorm, the Sedalia Water Department reported receiving only .32 of an inch of rain.

Congressmen assail Carter's dam stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Angry members of the House Interior Committee today assailed President Carter's decision to halt funding for 19 water-control projects as insensitive, illtimed, arrogant and wasteful.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus took the criticism on behalf of the Carter administration, attempting to assure Congress that the decision does not mean an end to the projects but only a re-evaluation.

The congressmen were not convinced.

"It's like pronouncing a verdict of guilty before the trial," said Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the Interior Committee and backer of the biggest affected dam, the Central Arizona Project.

"I seem to remember some speeches (during last year's presidential campaign) about openness and consulting with Congress," said Udall. "It seems to me you have the whole thing backwards" in stopping work before beginning the review.

Member after member reminded Andrus that Congress had thoroughly studied each of the 19 projects before authorizing them, and the waterworks should not be canceled with virtually no review.

President Carter notified Congress this week that he was proposing to halt new contracts for work on the projects until April 15. During that time, he said, the projects would be reevaluated and a decision made whether to give the go-ahead for continued work, modify the projects or kill them altogether. Another 301 projects would also be reviewed in that period but work would not stop on them during the review.

Carter said the 19 projects "appear unsupportable" for environmental, safety or cost-benefit factors.

Andrus cited the big $1.2-billion Auburn Dam project in California to explain the administration's reasoning.

"There is some question as to whether the dam will meet California's earthquake standards," Andrus said. "As a former governor of Idaho, I know first hand what it means to have a dam collapse, and I want to be certain there is no danger of a similar failure in a dam that is situated at the head of a valley containing a quarter of a million people."

He referred to the disastrous collapse of the Teton Dam in his home state last year.

Ex-policeman faces charges of forgery

The Houstonia city marshal was arrested at his Sedalia home about 10 p.m. Tuesday by the Pettis County sheriff's department on felony forgery charges filed Tuesday in Jackson County Magistrate Court.

Larry Findley, 26, 920 South Marshall, a former Sedalia police officer, was picked up by Jackson County authorities late Wednesday morning and transferred to Kansas City to face the charges.

According to Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, Findley allegedly took two checks, already signed by Houstonia officials, and deposited them in an account at the Jackson County State Bank for Crystal Construction Co.

A check for $2,271.69 and another for $1,638.56, drawn on Houstonia's general revenue and water department accounts at LaMonte Bank Community Bank, were allegedly made out to Jonathan P. Crystal and deposited by Findley in the Kansas City bank, Fairfax said. After making the deposit on Feb. 12, Findley allegedly tried to draw $300 from the account shortly after the deposit. Bank officials reportedly refused to allow the withdrawal until the checks cleared the LaMonte bank.

The two checks, allegedly stolen and passed by Findley were among three pre-signed checks stolen Feb. 11 from Houstonia's city hall, Fairfax said.

Outlet store is hit again by thieves

For the third time in as many weeks, shoplifters walked into Kingscourt Factory Outlet, 222 South Ohio, tried on clothes and walked out wearing the new clothes.

Police reported that two men came into the store about 1:45 p.m. Tuesday. One took a suit into a dressing room while the other waited near the front of the store. The one came from the dressing room and both hurried from the business. It was then discovered that a $60 suit was missing.

In other police news:

— Charles E. Johnson, 516 East 12th, reported the theft of several antiques from his home Tuesday night. Taken were four antique whiskey bottles and about 50 pieces of carnival glass. No value was set for the loss.

— Police are investigating two separate vandalism incidents that occurred sometime late Monday night or early Tuesday morning.

— Lois C. Sisemore, 920 West Seventh, reported two tires, valued as $220, were slashed sometime Monday night or early Tuesday, while her car was parked in front of her home.

— James L. Friedebach, 237 South Park, discovered a smashed windshield on his Fiat when he was leaving for work at 9 a.m. Tuesday. The windshield, valued at $125, was broken sometime between 11:45 p.m. Monday and 9 a.m. Tuesday, police said.

Salary hike for Hamm is given approval

Following a second City Council vote on the matter, and a subsequent tie-breaking vote cast by Mayor Allen Hawkins, a $900 per year salary increase was approved for City Economic Development Director James Hamm. Hamm currently earns $15,000 per year.

When the proposal was first voted on, it was defeated 4-2 on a voice vote. First Ward Democrat Gary Dey, Second Ward Democrat Raymond Bales, Third Ward Democrat Russell Bellamy and Fourth Ward Democrat Ray Hendricks voted against it. Favoring the motion were Fourth Ward Democrat David Curry and Third Ward Democrat Carl Franklin.

After the vote, Hendricks explained he opposed the proposed pay increase for Hamm because he thought the city could not afford it. At this point, Curry, who is chairman of the council economic development committee, explained that the $75 per month increase was already budgeted.

When Hamm was hired six months ago, he was told by the City Economic Development Board that he would get a salary review in six months, Curry added.

Hendricks said Tuesday that when he was informed that the increase was already included in this year's economic development department budget, he changed his mind on the matter. After Curry offered this explanation, he proposed a move to reconsider the matter, which was approved by Hawkins. This time, however, the vote was taken by roll call. Hawkins authorized the recount, Curry said, because some council members had misunderstood the budgeting situation when the initial voice vote was taken.

The council also approved, by a 5-1 voice vote, a $50 per month car allowance to new Economic Development specialist Greg Cecil. It was not known who cast the dissenting vote.

Youths placed on probation for break-in

Two Sedalia youths entered pleas of guilty in Circuit Court Tuesday to charges of second-degree burglary and stealing in connection with the Jan. 4 burglary of the Sedalia Country Club, 2800 South Limit.

Jeffrey Paul Handtke, 18, 616 South Barrett, and James Bryant Huffman, 17, 3305 South Stewart, were each sentenced to four years in the state penitentiary for the crimes — two years on the burglary charge and two on the stealing charge, to run concurrently.

The judgment, however, was stayed, and both Handtke and Huffman were placed on three-years' probation by recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Mark Kempton and upon written application by both defendants.

The two youths are subject to the following conditions of their probation: serve 46 days in the Pettis County jail, pay restitution of $608.42 to the Sedalia Country Club, and pay all of the court costs.

In addition, Handtke must seek counseling from the Mid-Missouri Mental Health Center or another appropriate agency.

In the country club break-in, $101 was stolen from a cigarette machine and cabinets behind the club's bar and a cash register was also damaged.

Huffman and Handtke were released on probation Tuesday and time already spent in jail since the Jan. 4 break-in was credited to the 46-day stipulation of the probation.

One body is found after boat capsizes

WARSAW — Searchers resumed dragging operations in the Osage River channel of the Lake of the Ozarks near here Wednesday morning for the body of a Warsaw man believed to have drowned while on a fishing trip with his nephew, whose body was found Tuesday.

The body of 16-year-old Mark C. Patton, Kansas City, was recovered by dragging operations about 3:40 p.m. Tuesday.

The boy and his uncle, who remains unidentified pending his discovery, were reported missing by the boy's mother about 7 p.m. Monday, according to a spokesman for the Benton County sheriff's department. He said the pair had left her home to fish in a 10-foot boat about 5 p.m. Monday.

Ice covers the entrance to the Blue Branch cove on the main lake channel and officials speculated the pair put the boat into the water upstream from the mouth of the cove. The capsized boat and motor were located about 2 a.m. Tuesday by Highway Patrol officers walking downstream from the mouth of the cove.

Ice in the river, a low level and rocks have hampered the dragging operation, the spokesman said.

Man arraigned on tampering charge

A 25-year-old Gravois Mills man was arraigned in Magistrate Court Tuesday afternoon on felony charges of tampering with a motor vehicle in connection with $3,800 worth of damage to three trucks and a fence at the Parkhurst Manufacturing Co. on Industrial Drive about 3:45 p.m. Sunday.

Randy Jo Bell reportedly rammed the plant's fence with a truck and then climbed into a similar truck on the Parkhurst lot and crashed through the fence.

Bell's preliminary hearing was set for 1:30 p.m. on March 3. He remains in the county jail in lieu of $5,000 bond.

☆ Council

(commercial business) at a Feb. 10 planning and zoning meeting, acting chairman Tom McCully broke a 4-4 tie by voting against Paxton.

At that time, McCully said he did not want "24th to turn into another 16th."

Since that time, however, Paxton has signed a real estate agreement that will permit future City Councils to recall his rezoning change, if desired.

The council also approved the expenditure of $495,321.59 for the construction of storm drains on State Fair, New York and Harding Ave. Most of the construction costs will be paid by federal matching funds, it was reported.

Display of locks is open

WASHINGTON (AP) — Locks have been an important element of the culture of Iran for at last 16 centuries, and an impressive variety of them has just gone on display at the Smithsonian Institution.

Locks have been used in Iran for security, but they also have been regarded as talismans to ward off evil, to insure happiness, to help unmarried women find husbands.

The exhibition of 463 locks spanning 16 centuries is being shown over a two-year period in this country as a salute to its bicentennial under the patronage of Farah Pahlavi, wife of the shah.

It is being circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service. It has already been seen in Austin, Tex., and New York City.

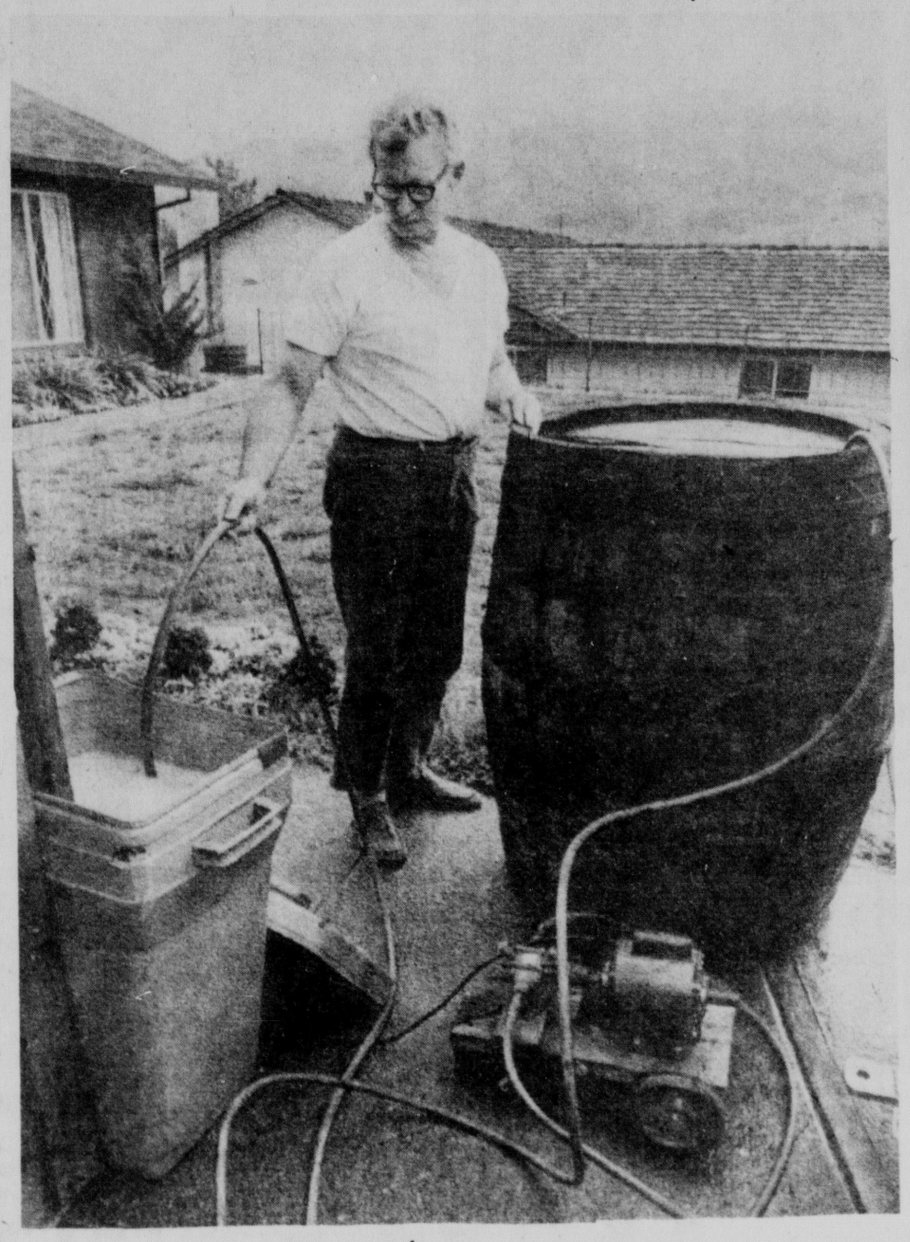
The oldest examples in the exhibition have barbed-spring mechanisms — type still made in Iran although the craft of the locksmith is dying out under the impact of cheaper machine-made models.

Some are shaped like the padlocks familiar in this country, but many more are in the shape of animals and humans. They range in size from more than a foot in length to one working model of steel and brass five by seven millimeters — small enough to fit into a pistachio shell.

Most of the exhibition is from the 15-year-old collection of Parviz Tanavoli, a professor of sculpture at Tehran University.

After the show closes at the Museum of Natural History here, it will travel to the Fine Arts Center of the South, Mobile, Ala., March 26-May 1; Muckenthaler Cultural Center, Fullerton, Calif., May 21-June 26; the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago, Sept. 10-Oct. 16; the Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto, Canada, Nov. 15-Dec. 11.

In 1978 it will be seen at the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts in Ohio, Jan. 7-Feb. 12; the Museum of Science, Boston, March 4-April 19.



Every drop counts

Bone-dry Northern California got a little rain over the weekend but the weatherman said the resulting precipitation would do little to ease the drought conditions that have forced many communities to ration water. Don Schroder, a resident of Marin County, where water officials have imposed the most stringent water rationing in the state, uses a pump, a plastic container and a large barrel to collect water from the roof downspout of his home.

Computer error is $60 million

MARYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Gloria Medlin never really believed she was $60 million richer, but it was fun to think about it — especially when the people who wrote the check refused to believe they had made a mistake.

A check for $60,000,008 arrived at Mrs. Medlin's home here on Saturday from the Blue Cross-Blue Shield office in Chattanooga.

Mrs. Medlin, 35, reported it Monday to company officials, who assured her that it would be impossible for a computer to authorize so large a check.

But rather than take any chances, the company asked Mrs. Medlin to return the check. In return, officials said, they'd give her a check for the amount she had expected — $8.

American TV shows find new popularity in foreign lands

By MIKE GOODKIND
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Japanese rice farmers, Australian sheepherders, Barbados fishermen and Russian comrades watch the same television shows you do. Sometimes, anyway.

Governments and networks in foreign nations buy hundreds of U.S. television programs each year because they are popular and cheap, despite occasional objections from their own viewers or producers.

In major industrial nations, popular U.S. shows are sometimes seen within a day or two of their stateside airings. Other times, especially in poor or small countries, programs which have been off the air for years in America find wide audiences.

Not all U.S. programs make it overseas. Situation comedies, for example, are not big sellers because their cultural intonations are lost in translation.

And sometimes sales present problems.

Herb Lazarus, general manager of Columbia Pictures Television-International, points to a defunct American western, "Nakia," the story of an American Indian sheriff.

"We couldn't figure out why we couldn't sell this thing in Arab countries," Lazarus said, "until we realized that Nakia's badge is shaped like a six-pointed star," the national symbol of Israel.

Shows dramatizing revolutions often find no sales in Latin American countries, and programs depicting such things as consumer protests aren't aired where dictators are in power. Racially troubled South Africa, which has had television for only a year, has been hesitant to show any program involving blacks.

The Communist countries buy only a very small number of U.S. shows, but Richard Harper, vice president of worldwide syndication for 20th Century Fox Television, says his firm recently sold "Flipper," a children's show about a trained dolphin, to the Russians.

In some of the larger industrial nations, low costs and top ratings offer a dynamite combination which would be hard for any government or network official to resist.

In Great Britain, where U.S. programs account for a modest 13 per cent of all programs telecast, two detective adventures, "Kojak" and "Starsky and Hutch," consistently bag top ratings, says a spokesman for the British Broadcasting Corp.

After shows are seen in the states, Lazarus says U.S. distributors are able to sell shows in Britain for about $15,000 to $20,000 an hour. To reproduce the show in Britain would cost several hundred thousand dollars.

Sometimes the economic and audience appeal of U.S. shows aren't a happy mixture.

In France, where "Kojak" takes the ratings against locally produced shows on two competing stations, actors and TV producers struck for weeks demanding an increase in local programs.

But in Japan, only a handful of U.S. shows make it onto prime time, say spokesmen, because local viewers prefer Japanese productions.

And in Germany, a spokesman for ZDF, one of two national networks, says, "Generally one can say that the U.S. crime series bought by ZDF are acceptable to the public, but despite their polished production have lower switch-on quotas than rival German productions."

In small nations, the cost factor becomes most evident. In Peru, for example, a half-hour show sells for about $135.

"Just to light a stage would cost them more than it will cost to buy the whole program from an exporter," says Harper.

In tiny Honduras, one of two stations in the capital of Tegucigalpa airs almost all U.S. shows for its four hours of nightly television.

"Culturally, it leaves a lot to be desired," says government trade spokesman Mario Martin, who decries the U.S. influence permeating his country via the tube. "Consumption patterns are influenced — tastes in homes, decorating, consumer goods."

Local programs, such as sports or news, are seen on the Honduras capital's other station, but Martin concedes that the cost of producing entertainment drama in the tiny Central American nation would be prohibitive.

About a third of the homes in Honduras have TV sets, says Martin, but television reaches a majority of residents because they watch TV at a neighbor's house or go to the cantinas.

Situation comedies like "Happy Days" occasionally are sold to overseas markets. Yoshikazu Takuchi, Japanese vice consul in Los Angeles, says viewers in his nation don't understand the jokes but watch in fascination to see what life in America is like.

Fox's Harper says some comedies, like "M-A-S-H," can be made marketable only by "practically rewriting the script" during the dubbing process.

"We got the best comedy writers we could find in Mexico City. Half the jokes in our Spanish version are translated into completely different meanings."

Columbia's Lazarus says that dialogue referring to drugs is sometimes altered for Mexico and other markets. A reference to heroin, for example, could be translated into "dangerous powder," during the dubbing.

Syndicators are reluctant to discuss the importance of the international market to their companies. But the fact that none of the hundreds of shows currently available from a handful of syndicators and production companies has been produced expressly for foreign distribution is an indication that the multi-million dollar market is an adjunct, not a staple, to the billion dollar U.S. TV industry.

Kojak — Japanese style

Shuichiro Moriyama works on the translation into Japanese of an episode of "Kojak" at a Tokyo television studio dubbing session. "Kojak" is one of hundreds of American TV programs bought each year by governments and networks in foreign nations. They find the programs popular with their viewers, and buying them is cheaper than making their own in many cases.

Senators request more grain inspection money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leaders of the Senate Agriculture Committee asked Tuesday for an additional $3.3 million for the Agriculture Department during the next seven months so that fees for supervising grain inspections won't be charged the private industry.

The fees are required under a sweeping 1976 law that revamped the system of inspecting and weighing grain as it moves from the farm to export markets or domestic mills.

"The cornerstone to the act is the greatly intensified federal role in insuring accuracy of grades and weights," Chairman Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., and Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., noted in a letter to Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo.

Eagleton is chairman of the agricultural appropriations subcommittee, which soon will be considering supplemental appropriations for USDA for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

The new law requires that actual inspections be done by federal employes at the major ports and increases substantially the federal supervision at interior terminals by state and private inspectors.

The fees are to cover the cost of both the inspections and the supervision outside of the Washington office of the new Federal Grain Inspection Service.

Talmadge and Dole, the ranking Republican, asked Eagleton to consider adding enough funds so that the supervision fees could be deferred until fiscal 1978, with this year's costs paid out of general tax revenues.

They said that enough qualified supervisors will not be trained for two or three years for the agency to provide the level of services for which they are charging the fees.

"Collection of the fees would be unfair until the agency was providing the full supervision service specified," they wrote.

DISC BLADES
New Heat Treated Disc Harrow Blades
Made of heavy gauge high carbon alloy steel, heat treated for long trouble-free service. The special forging process used gives the blades a finer grain in the steel and makes it tougher, and much more able to withstand rough usage. The cutting edges are hardened to hold their edge longer yet are not brittle and will not easily break or split when striking stones or other hard objects. All fit square axle unless indicated.

Mobile deejays take disco sound out of halls, into private homes

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

They are the molders of moods, the shapers of sound. They can take a room full of people and turn it into a twirling, gyrating, stomping mass of sweaty flesh.

An offshoot of the discotheque disc jockeys, these mobile deejays go from private party to private party, carrying their equipment with them. And they say business is booming and has yet to peak.

Using audio systems and lighting setups ranging in price from a few hundred dollars to over $15,000, the mobile deejay will bring the disco scene to your home, catering to your own musical taste — rhythm and blues, disco, Latin, rock, the 50s, big bands, jazz.

"The general public is just now catching up with it," says Jeff Baugh of Disco on the Run, Inc., a New York-based mobile company. "There's a lot of room for companies like ours. But it has to be done in a professional manner. You're dealing with the straight working public, and a lot of people we handle don't go to discotheques."

Baugh, 34, started his group 3½ years ago. He has two sound systems, one worth about $8,000 and the other about $15,000. The latter is capable of projecting to about 1,000 people, he said. His fee for four hours of boogie is a minimum of $400. This includes the deejay, lights, sound and records.

His sound is primarily rhythm and blues and jazz.

"It's music that has a very predictable dancing beat to it," Baugh said. "It's set like rock and roll, which has breaks every few minutes."

Franklin Walker, 26, who's been running the Gemini Experience in Philadelphia for about a year, plays only the disco sound.

"I try to keep them dancing as much as possible," he said. "That's the magic trick here — keeping them on the floor."

Walker charges about $50 for five hours of music. His turntable, speakers, receiver and mixer is a $2,000 system.

Jane Brinton, who runs the Aristocrat Mobile Discotheque in Los Angeles, also plays strictly disco.

"I feel with our parties, we're the discotheque atmosphere and the music is the most important thing," said the 26-year-old native of London. "They're hiring us for our knowledge. If they ask for requests, then it's just like turning on the radio."

Aristocrat has been playing dance music for the Hollywood set for about six years, she said. The deejays travel with two units, each worth about $15,000. For an entire night of dancing, the charge is $300.

Part of the allure of mobile deejays not only has to do with the overwhelming popularity of the disco, but also is firmly rooted in economics: the mobile deejay often is cheaper then a live band or renting audio equipment for one night.

Norman Dolph, a 37-year-old Tulsa, Okla., native who runs Stoy Portable Disco in New York, outlines the advantages of doing private parties instead of the discotheque scene.

"At a public place, each person is into his or her own good time, and the owner has to offer the same music all through the night since people are constantly arriving," he said. "At a private party where all the people arrive at about the same time, you can steer that whole crowd in and out of different bags all night.

"We always bring about 100 times more music than we need in order to cater to everyone's taste. We travel with about 1,500 to 2,000 records."

The mobile deejay's customers range in age from 6 to 99 and come from all walks of life. Some functions are simple parties in basements and apartments. Others are special occasions — birthdays, wedding anniversaries and receptions, fund-raising balls and promotion parties.

These disc jockeys say they're in the business because they love music, but many admit it's the best ego trip around.

"If you don't project your personality, then the music loses a lot," said Daniel Clayton, 28, president of Music Unlimited Street Jocks in Washington, D.C. "A jock is a personality."

Mobile deejays either must buy their own records, obtain them from professional record pools or get them free from record companies. Most disc jockeys are quick to point out that they have become the biggest promoters of records in the $4 billion disco industry.

"Everything is production and performance," says deejay Rafael Charres, 28, of New York. "Sixty or 70 per cent of the hits today in rhythm and blues have come out of the disco. It's a living survey clinic — you can actually see the future of a record by watching the reaction of the crowd."

On the go

Norman Dolph, seen here at his New York City home, is a mobile deejay, one of the record spinners who brings the disco scene into private homes. Mobile deejays, numbering in the hundreds now, provide music for events ranging from small, private parties to large social functions, carrying their own equipment and records with them. They say business has not reached its peak yet.

Scout news

Cub Scout Pack 69 held its Blue and Gold banquet Monday at St. Paul's Lutheran School, with Vitula Zimmerschied receiving recognition for her two years of service as a den mother.

A film presentation was made by Scout Master Donny Stratton and awards were presented by Cub Master Dean Schnakenberg to the following scouts: Nathan Wolf, Alan Schnakenberg, Eric Monsees, Mike Stratton, Michael Grasz and Kerry Felkner.

Recognition was also given to Scout Troop 69 and the Cub Scout Pack for their participation in helping distribute the recently-completed city plan leaflets.

The Scout troop and pack are sponsored by the St. Paul's Lutheran Men's Club.

It was also announced that a Court of Honor will be held at 7:30 p.m. March 21 at St. Paul's Lutheran School.

Sun, ocean only answers, contends Jaques Cousteau

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacques Cousteau speaks of the sea when he speaks of world energy problems: Nuclear power is a "Titanic" of a solution, a disaster waiting to happen; the true answer is the sun shining over the world's oceans.

"The Titanic was unsinkable and it sunk on its first voyage. So now we're building unsinkable nuclear power plants," the famed undersea explorer said.

"It could happen tomorrow," he said of a nuclear disaster.

Cousteau, 67, talked about the world's troubles in an interview during a visit here to see the Cousteau Society's new six-segment "Oasis in Space" film series, which debuted nationally Feb. 22.

"The three most important problems are over-population, food and energy," Cousteau said. "Then we have to figure out how to share these things."

Naturally, the man who has explored the world's oceans saw the solutions to at least the energy problem related to the seas.

"The main source of solar energy is in the ocean," he said. "Two-thirds of all the solar energy on earth falls into the ocean. The currents concentrate the heat in particular places, like the Florida strait, around Japan and the equatorial currents.

"Solar energy, well exploited, could easily represent four-fifths of the world's energy by the year 2000," Cousteau said.

Cousteau said it is inevitable the world will shift to the sun for power but one of his fears is "we are going to turn to solar energy too late." An even bigger fear is nuclear energy.

"The biggest danger is nuclear energy," he said. "Any other catastrophe can be repaired. A nuclear one cannot. Many scientists say there's no danger, but there is."

Moreover, Cousteau said, nuclear energy is a false solution.

He said United Nations estimates show $850 billion spent for nuclear power by the year 2000 would account for only 20 per cent of the world's energy needs. And $1 trillion spent in the same time on solar energy would provide energy for 80 per cent of the planet.

Cousteau sees a shift in interest to solar energy, but he said for spending to shift similarly, there must be citizen pressure.

"What we have to decide is if we're going to be enslaved to arbitrary decision of kings in the Middle East or are we going to develop a reasonable national energy program to be out of reach of blackmail."

Rock music, computers replacing Plato on some campuses

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — To a young philosophy professor at the College of William and Mary, rock musicians don't just make noise. Some discuss existential philosophy.

To a philosopher at the University of Toledo, the computer isn't just a device to snarl credit card accounts. It's a tool for teaching symbolic logic.

Scores of colleges across the country are offering courses such as "Philosphy and Sex" or "The Philosophy of Aging" and using tools such as television and the computer to introduce students to the discipline.

Supporters of such methods concede that, as with other liberal arts, the percentage of undergraduates taking philosophy probably has declined in the last five years. They say that classroom innovations are important in reaching the student who might take only one or two philosophy courses.

Skeptics wonder whether fad has not replaced scholarship.

"First thing, the teaching of philosophy certainly is in need of 'improvement,'" said Dr. Sidney Hook, philosopher and fellow at the Hoover Institution for War, Revolution and Peace in Stanford, Calif.

"But in philosophy, there is only one method of teaching which is warranted by the nature of philosophy, and that is the Socratic method, in which the teacher does not proclaim truths but makes the student think and question. Anything else is edification but not philosophy."

New directions in teaching philosphy were taken in the early 1970s and, according to several philosophers, were offshoots of the student activist movement.

At William and Mary in Williamsburg Va., Prof. James Harris has turned to rock music to illustrate philosophic principles. Although Harris says he's glad "my whole philosophic reputation doesn't rest on this," he has found modern music "really useful in reaching some students."

"I began using music in a series of 20-or 30-minute programs I was doing around campus for various social clubs. The response was so incredibly favorable that I began using it in class.

"I admit a lot of Top 40 stuff is trash. But there are some really intelligent and sensitive observers of the human situation who are writing and performing rock music.

"For example, there's a lot that can be done with alienation in rock music, the kind of alienation a lot of existential philosophy is talking about, particularly Leon Russell's 'Stranger in a Strange Land' or 'Moody Blues' 'In a Lost World.'"

At the University of Toledo, Prof. Richard Wright uses mini computers to teach students how to work proofs in symbolic logic.

"The (computer) program gives him hints in solving the problems and tests his work," Wright said. "One important advantage is that the computer terminals are available 24 hours a day. Another is that many students are embarrassed to ask too many questions, but with the computer they can go back and work the problems as many times as they please."

In other departments, professors have applied principles of traditional philosophy to 20th century American life.

At the University of Delaware, Dr. Sandra Harding uses philosophers as diverse as Plato and Karl Marx to examine the status of women in contemporary society.

"We look at feminist theory as critical of the concepts that have shaped society," she said. "We examine theoretical proposals to change the status of women and study various explanations for the oppression of women. Freud and Marx, for example, focused on the oppression of women but had very different ideas on why this happened and how to change it."

At the University of Maryland, Dr. Frederick Suppe teaches a course on philosophy and homosexuality. He says he uses the principles of philosophy to show the homosexual student "how to incorporate his homosexuality into an overall lifestyle so that one has a rewarding life."

Suppe also teaches a similar course for heterosexual students. But he says the problem of homosexuality is particularly challenging because "most philosophers and theologians have condemned any homosexual activity as immoral."

The course, which he has taught for only two semesters, centers on lectures and readings in modern literature, theology and traditional philosophy, including the works of St. Thomas Aquinas and the 1975 Vatican statement condemning homosexuality.

Dr. Harry Moody, who teaches philosophy to continuing education students at New York's Hunter College, claims philosophy can help "fill the vacuum of meaning" and help the elderly prepare for death.

Although he has reservations about a few of the trends, which he would not identify, Dr. Norman Bowie, executive secretary of the American Philosophical Association, said the APA welcomed efforts to enliven the teaching of philosophy.

"I don't see that we've overthrown the classical courses at all," Bowie said. "All the traditional core courses are there. First you've got to introduce people to basic philosophy, then you apply them to medicine, science or politics."

But one philosophy professor, who asked not to be identified, had another opinion: "This I would call the vulgarization of philosophy."

Take time to note details when making new home plans

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

In planning now for that new house come spring, make sure you've given enough thought to details. Do you really want that unusual, colored tile in your bathroom or kitchen? Will there be enough space in the fireplace area to make a cozy living room niche with your oversize sofa?

Taking the time to consider such problems while you can still alter a house plan may avoid a lot of grief. Often there are so many big decisions to make in connection with a new house that some details are overlooked.

Acquiring a good book on decorating can be very helpful while house planning is in progress. It can help circumvent problems because a lot of decorating later will revolve around the interior architecture, which cannot be manipulated at whim.

"Every part of the decorating process comes back to planning," points out William Hague in "The Complete Basic Book of Decorating." The book emphasizes many things that are done wrong, even as it suggests the right decorating tack. The suggestions can be helpful while the house is being planned.

The genial, former longtime editor of House and Garden Guides has designed or remodeled more than 15 houses and apartments in the last two decades. In putting his book together he tried to make it as timeless as possible with many illustrations, some in color. And many of the ideas may have instant appeal for people who need inspiration. His treatments of small rooms are particularly interesting.

"Be careful as you buy or build. Make sure you like the architectural style," he advises. "You can create an early American setting inside a contemporary structure, but it will be discordant."

In planning early, a potential home owner will be ready for queries from builders, masons, painters. It should avert top-of-the-head answers that aren't explicit. For example, what is yellow, what is blue? Colors are open to interpretation unless the exact color can be seen by the people discussing it.

Interior color planning may not receive much thought beyond a potential color scheme for each room. But how will the colors look from room to room? When handling a house plan, this point may be forgotten. Hague stresses the importance of color and he lists 50 of the most common color mistakes, which include:

—Using bizarre or offbeat colors in ceramic tile, laminate counters or other fixed architectural elements in kitchen or bathroom.

—Copying exact color schemes of model rooms in stores and houses. They usually don't come off.

—Using cold colors if a room faces north, hot ones if the room faces south.

—Having the idea that because a house is old it cannot be treated in a contemporary way. A Victorian house can respond brilliantly to a modern color scheme.

—Permitting one dominant element, such as an old-fashioned, red brick fireplace, to spoil a color scheme. There can be no sacred cows in decorating.

Other ideas that may affect architectural planning could include lighting — choices might include luminous ceiling panels, cove or cornice lighting, valances, soffits. Floors may be flagstone, marble, slate, brick, oak block, ceramic, vinyl, rubber, cork, asphalt.

Walls should be considered carefully. One may want mirrored walls, special shelf systems, wood paneling or whatever. It should all be planned from scratch because it may take time. It will be easier on the builder and your pocketbook. Then, too, there are builders who will tell you it is too late to do anything different once they've put the first nail in the house.

Home safety to be topic of seminars

"Home is Where the Hurt Is," a seminar on household products and household hazards, will be presented by the University of Missouri Extension Centers of the Show-Me Area. The seminars will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. March 1 at the Extension Center, Higginsville; March 8 at the Missouri Public Service Building, Clinton; March 9 at the RLDS Church, Warrensburg; March 10 at the Central Missouri Electric, Sedalia.

There is no charge for the seminars. Some of the local extension centers would like to have interested persons pre-register by calling the center because of space limitations in the buildings where the seminar will be held.

Topics to be discussed at the seminar include "A Burning Issue," a discussion of flammability standards of clothing and household textiles by Henrietta Clark, Warrensburg; "Food And Fact Fallacies," discussing the safety of the food your family eats by Carol Castaner, Warrensburg; "A Matter of Time for Youngsters and Oldsters," a discussion of home safety for the younger and older generation including toys, fires and poison, by Beverly Pfeiffer, Sedalia. "Every Day a Potential Hazard," discussing risks in the household products found under the sink or in the bath by Arlene Short, Clinton. "The Inequalities in Consumer Safety," dealing with the system of consumer safety programs which is less effective for some segments of the population than others, by Pat Hall, Higginsville.

The discussion of home saftey for children by Beverly Pfeiffer will include a discussion of toy safety.

There are seven toy dangers as listed by the Consumer Product Safety Commission. When buying toys for children, adults should watch for the following points:

—Sharp edges; Toys of brittle plastic can be broken, exposing sharp cutting edges. Wooden, metal and plastic toys sometime have sharp edges due to poor construction.

—Small parts; Tiny toys and toys with small removable parts can be swallowed or become lodged in a child's windpipe, ears or nose. The squeakers in some squeeze toys can be removed and possibly swallowed. The seams of poorly constructed stuffed dolls or animals can break open and release small pellets.

—Loud noises; Caps and some noise-making guns and other toys can produce sounds at noise levels that can damage hearing. The law requires labeling on boxes of caps producing noise above a certain level.

—Sharp points; Broken toys can expose dangerous prongs and knife-sharp points. Pins and staples on dolls' clothes, hair and accessories can easily puncture an unsuspecting child. Even a teddy bear or stuffed toy can have barbed eyes or wired limbs which can cut or stab.

—Propelled objects; Flying toys can be turned into weapons and can injure eyes in particular. Children should never be allowed to play with adult lawn darts or other equipment that has sharp points. Arrows or darts used by children should have soft cork tips, rubber suction cups or other protective tips intended to prevent injury.

—Wrong toy for the wrong age; Toys that may be safe for older children can be extremely dangerous in the hands of little ones.

—Electric toys; Electric toys that are improperly constructed, wired or misused can shock or burn. Electric toys must meet requirements for maximum surface temperatures and electrical construction and promiment warning labels. Those toys with heating elements are recommended only for children over eight years old.

This is just one of the topics included in a seminar that could help make your home a safer place to live.

Potato salad: the Czech way

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

In Czechoslovakia cooks usually put pickles in their potato salads — or so we heard. Sure enough, when we looked into "The Czechoslovak Cookbook" by Joza Brizova (Crown) we found that both the recipes given for potato salad called for just that savory addition.

Then Blanka Kmoch, who now lives in New York but who received a degree at the Home Economy Institute in Kolin, Czechslovakia, confirmed the addition. Blanka gave us another good idea: "In America potato salads are usually served with ham or turkey on a cold buffet. In Czechoslovakia we serve them with hot dishes: fried fish fillets, roast chicken or breaded pork chops."

CZECH POTATO SALAD A LA BLANKA

4 pounds potatoes
2 medium carrots
Salt
2 cups mayonnaise
1/8 teaspoon white pepper
1 tablespoon sugar
3 tablespoons dill pickle liquid
3 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 tablespoons salad oil
1/2 cup finely diced dill pickle
1/2 cup finely diced onion
1/2 cup finely diced celery
1/4 cup minced parsley
1/4 pound finely diced cooked ham (generous 2-3rds cup)
2 hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped
1/2 cup cooked green peas

In a large saucepot bring 4 quarts water and 2 tablespoons salt to a boil; add the scrubbed, unpeeled potatoes and carrots. Boil, covered, until tender when pierced with a fork. Drain. Remove skins from vegetables. Slice potatoes — there should be about 2 quarts. Dice carrots — there should be about 1/2 cup.

In a large bowl or refrigerator container stir together the mayonnaise, pepper, sugar, pickle liquid, vinegar, 3 tablespoons water and the oil. Add potatoes, carrots, dill pickle, onion, celery, parsley, ham, eggs and peas. Toss thoroughly but lightly. Serve at room temperature or chill. Garnish with sliced hard-cooked egg and dill pickle slices.

Makes 12 servings.

Pickles are a must ingredient in this salad and it is often served with fried fish fillets. (AP)

Polly's pointers

Hair spray still an ink remover

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — One of my Pet Peeves is with the packagers of luncheon meat. At lunchtime when most of us are in a hurry to fix a quick sandwich, we have to struggle with that thin plastic strip that is all around each slice. One has to be very careful in removing this or else you will find yourself with a strip in your mouth. To me these strips of plastic are as disturbing as hair in food. — KAY.

DEAR POLLY — I have had good luck removing ink from clothing by soaking the stained part in rubbing alcohol overnight and then laundering as usual. (Test first). — HERMAN.

DEAR POLLY — and Mrs. J.S. — I, too, have been using those picture hangers with adhesive backs for fifteen years and have had no trouble. I like to change my pictures often and do not like holes in the wall, so they answer my purpose perfectly. When removing them I soak each square with a wet cloth and am sure the square is thoroughly soaked before even trying to remove it. This takes some time and patience but does work. Then the wall can be washed with warm water and the paint is left intact. I learned this from instructions on the package so do try it, Mrs. J.S. for it works. — H.K.H.

DEAR POLLY — You will be able to see and prevent the loss of croquet wickets (hoops) in the grass if you wrap the top and sides with yellow plastic tape.

Two or three old tires fastened against the end of the garage will prevent damage to the car bumper and the wall should you drive in too far.

To prevent losing the key to a padlock that is not in use, slip the key on a key chain and the chain on the lock. — HANNA.

DEAR POLLY — I have an easy way to grease those vegetable or soup cans such as many of us use for baking various kinds of bread. I put a piece of plastic bread wrapper over the end of a pastry brush and hold it in place with a twist that comes on bread wrappers. There is no washing of the brush, and no danger of cutting one's hand should there be a rough place along the cut rim of the can. — KATHRYN.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I would like to know how to remove ball point ink from vinyl chair covers. I have tried some sprays, but had no luck. I would appreciate some help. — E.E.P.

DEAR E.E.P. — Have you tried hair spray? It is great for this. — POLLY. (NEA)

Sweet Springs wins debate trophy

CONCORDIA — Sweet Springs High School won the I-70 Conference debate competition at the annual speech and debate tournament held here Thursday and Saturday and won the 1977 trophy for debate. Rhonda Gieseke won the gold medal for first in debate for Sweet Springs and Terri Winson, also of Sweet Springs, won second.

In the overall speech tournament points, Windsor took first place followed by Sweet Springs. Grain Valley won the one-act play competition. In individual competition, Jeanne Kelz, Sweet Springs, won second for humorous interpretation and Jeff Aiken won two third places for Sweet Springs in original oration and extemporaneous.

The I-70 conference is made up of Windsor, Sweet Springs, Grain Valley, St. Paul's, Concordia, Wellington and Santa Fe high schools.

Capital punishment for teen-agers? Many say yes

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At George's age, any other kid might be tinkering with a car, cramming for exams, going out with girls, agonizing over what to make of the many years of life stretching ahead.

George is doing none of those things. He sits on death row waiting for the state to kill him. He is 17 years old.

George, Gary and Sammy and perhaps a dozen others have killed, and now the state insists that they, too, shall die.

They are children of death.

They are children in the eyes of society because they have not passed through the rites of adulthood, finished school, taken a steady job, established a home of their own, started a family. They have not staked a claim as a grown-up in the community.

By the calendar, too, they are children. George was 15 at the time he slammed a rock into Pamela's head and killed her. Gary also was 15 when he shot and killed Mike. Sammy was 17 when Joan died by his hand.

But they committed a very adult crime — murder. Under today's laws, and with statistics showing an increase in violent juvenile crime, the children will not be spared by the juries.

The children are among more than 350 prisoners on death rows in 20 states awaiting execution in the electric chair or the gas chamber, by hanging or before a firing squad. Just how many children is difficult to say because of the paucity of research on the subject and because of confusion about the status of capital punishment laws in several states.

"Thou shalt give life for life, eye for eye ... wound for wound." — Exodus 21:23-25, The Old Testament.

The shots that rang out in Utah, cutting down Gary Gilmore last month, ended a 10-year hiatus on capital punishment in the United States, but only the capital punishment laws of three states — Texas, Georgia and Florida — specifically have been ruled acceptable by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Florida is where George waits.

Georgia is where Sammy and Gary wait.

Lawyers and judges on both sides of the death penalty debate agree it's inevitable that some youngsters convicted of brutal murders will be executed if the public continues to accept capital punishment.

It may be repulsive to a society that dotes on its children, but it is nothing new.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People says this country has executed 126 persons who were 18 or younger, and 94 of them were black. The youngest was 14-year-old George Stinney Jr., a black electrocuted in South Carolina in 1944 for murder. The youngest girl was Virginia Christian, also black, 17 when she was electrocuted in Virginia in 1912 for murder.

The first on record was Henry Welcome, race unknown, 18 when executed in Vermont in 1871 for murder. The most recent was Joe Henry Johnson, black, 17 when executed in 1961 in Alabama for murder.

The state laws upheld by the Supreme Court last July require that mitigating circumstances, including a defendant's youth, be taken into account in imposing a sentence of death.

A survey of 32 state statutes on the books at the time of the high court's ruling turned up only seven which absolutely forbade executing persons under a certain age. Defendants under 18 at the time of the crime could not be executed in Colorado, Connecticut, Maryland, New York and New Mexico.

That also was the minimum age in California, but a state court recently struck down the death penalty law for reasons unrelated to age. New Hampshire set the minimum age at 17.

Though a number of states include youth as a mitigating factor, the legislation suggests that age has not been an important issue in the death penalty debates across the country.

One reason is that most states allow children to be tried in juvenile court, where the death penalty cannot be imposed.

But the National Council on Crime and Delinquency reports a trend among the states to lower the juvenile court age and send more teenagers into adult court.

That has followed an apparent increase in youth crime — usually vandalism, purse-snatching and mugging, but sometimes murder. The FBI found a 28 per cent increase in the number of persons under 18 arrested for murder from 1970 through 1975. The number of adults arrested for murder during the period rose 22 per cent.

"Justice for the child means exactly that, and there can be no justice in executing a child, any child, anywhere." — Report of a University of Chicago conference of judges, lawyers, teachers, social workers about 17 years ago.

The case histories of George and Gary and Sammy sound like so many other dramas of death. There are the victims. There are the survivors, finding no comfort in the notion that a mere stripling hurled such grief upon them.

In December, three months after he turned 16, Gary Lee Hawes stood in a South Georgia courtroom and heard himself sentenced to death.

He was convicted of shooting Stephen Michael Johnson, a 19-year-old checkout clerk, during an armed robbery in a supermarket in Clinch County, Ga., last April 20. Hawes is black, Johnson was white. Hawes' two older brothers were convicted in the same case, but they were sentenced to life in prison.

"Some kids get off, some don't," said Millard Farmer of Atlanta, head of the Southern Poverty Law Center's death penalty defense project who is representing Gary in appealing his case in the Georgia Supreme Court. "Gary was the person who had the gun in his hand and fired the shot. But it went off accidentally or something. He never intended to kill the man."

The Hawes brothers are from Florida, where their family still lives. "They're poor people, and unable to explain why their kids did this. Farmer said, "But as wrong as they think it was, they don't think he should be killed."

Hawes is held in the Cook County Jail, and on a recent visit, Farmer said Gary had only one request. "He said, 'If I could just get a quiet place where I could read my Bible and not be around all this cussin.'"

Farmer described the Cook County sheriff as a "humane man who will take care of him (Gary) and see that there aren't any homosexual attacks on him." But he said he fears for Gary if the state transfers him to the Reidsville Prison's death row

---

"All he is, is just a child, really," — Sammy's lawyer.

According to prosecutor Joseph Briley, Sammy Gibson "was just a run-of-the-mill 17-year-old when he killed and raped Joan Bryan in her Gray, Ga., home while her 5-year-old daughter, Stacey, watched. Gibson is black, Mrs. Bryan was white.

Briley asked for the death penalty. He has sought death for 12 men, got it for five.

"It weighs awful heavy to sit around the office and think about having five people on death row," he said. "'Course, I didn't put 'em there. They put themselves there. None of us is bloodthirsty."

Farmer also represents Gibson, and he is considering several avenues for appealing Gibson's death sentence. The grounds, he says, are that the law was not applied correctly and that Gibson was not treated fairly.

"I feel it should be carried out. If he ever gets out, just think what another family could go through. Whatever the law allows, we're going to have to accept. It's in the hands of the courts now. And God." — mother of George's victim.

The case of Geoge Vasil, the youngest American facing a state execution, also is on appeal.

According to Florida lawyer Richard Schopp, public defender for the 15-year-old white youth in his murder trial, George was a lonely, mixed-up kid possessed by powerful emotions and too immature to control them.

Whatever the motive, Pamela Ann Vasser is dead.

"She was a child that loved everybody. Everybody loved her." Edna Vasser spoke of her daughter calmly, with no revenge, but the long-distance telephone line did not conceal the ache in her voice.

"I've gone over what has happened a hundred times every day, and I still can't understand why," she said more than two years after the horror of Sept. 19, 1974.

Pam, a blonde, brown-eyed child of 12, was diabetic, her mother said, "and she knew she had to eat at certain times. She was always prompt. You could tell time by her."

When Pam wasn't home for the 6 p.m. meal that day, her parents and older brother John became frantic. At 7:15, they called the police.

About 5 a.m. the next day, Pam's naked and bloody body was found in a ditch not far from the Vasser home in Fort Pierce.

Investigators questioned George at the home of his parents, Gus and Angie Vasil, and the boy confessed.

"I really didn't have any doubt that he did it," said Schopp.

"Apparently George had seen the girl, followed her and, somewhere along the line, he tried to have sex with her," Schopp said. "He got scared, hit her over the head with a large rock and stabbed her with a palmette frond. She died from the head wound.

"The psychiatrists said he was so sexually immature he was more or less unable to control his passions and that his behavior was the result of adolescent sexual impotence."

Schopp contends that investigators tricked the boy into confessing by "promising they would take care of him, send him to a hospital."

But George was found to be legally sane, and prosecutors resisted the defense effort to have him committed to an institution as a mentally disturbed sex offender.

Both families were churchgoers, the Vassers at the Church of Christ and the Vasils at the Greek Orthodox Church. Pam "would take her Bible to church and look up verses, and she had talked about being baptized," said her mother. George was an altar boy.

Because of George's age, his clean record and the evidence of mental disturbance, Schopp was startled when the jury recommended death and the judge agreed.

While the case is on appeal, George is doing his growing up in a death row cell at the Florida State Prison. He told an interviewer from Corrections Magazine, "I understand things more clearly now by being here. I just got to learn to control myself — watch out for things."

Book ban controversy divides Island Trees, N.Y.

Plaintiffs in lawsuit

These five students have brought suit with the New York Civil Liberties Union against the Island Trees, N.Y., school board. From left are seniors Russell Rieger, Glenn Yarris, Steve Pico, Jacqueline Gold and Paul Soshinski, who is still in junior high school. They are contesting the board's action in banning several books from the school library.

AP Newsfeatures Writer

ISLAND TREES, N.Y. — Nearly one year after Richard Yarris complained to his mother that Bernard Malamud's "The Fixer" had been removed from the school library here, that book and eight others still are off the shelves.

In addition, some people in this community of 4,500 homes aren't speaking to others. Television cameras have descended upon school board meetings. And five students, backed by the New York Civil Liberties Union, have hauled the Island Trees Board of Education into court.

The students say the school board has violated their constitutional rights, the teachers' union says its academic freedom has been infringed upon and outraged parents accuse the board of imposing their moral values on children. But board members say they are simply discharging their duty to decide for the community what the students will read.

The American Civil Liberties Union says Island Trees is just one case in a nationwide epidemic of book-banning.

Court precedents are mixed. The ACLU won a 1976 case in the U.S. Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. School officials in Strongsville, a Cleveland suburb, had removed Kurt Vonnegut's "Cat's Cradle" and Joseph Heller's "Catch 22" from the school library shelves.

The appeals court ruled that school officials cannot arbitrarily remove books they dislike. Denying students easy access to them in school would run counter to the First Amendment, the court held.

But the ACLU lost a Flushing, N.Y., case that stemmed from the banning of Thomas Piri's "Down These Mean Streets." The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review that case.

The Island Trees case may also go to the Supreme Court and possibly produce a decision on how far local control can go before violating the First Amendment.

"We're in this to the end," says Frank Martin, a New York City police sergeant and vice president of the school board. "The school board is not going to back down. The ACLU is just using these students and their parents."

When the suit was filed in January, the president of the school board, Richard Ahrens, said, "This is purely a matter of who is going to decide what is best for the students of Island Trees — the parents or the Civil Liberties Union — and we don't think it's the Civil Liberties Union."

Steve Pico, president of the student council at Island Trees High School and one of the plaintiffs, is just as insistent.

"This has changed our lives. We are looking into law, we understand civil rights. They think they are banning words, but they are banning ideas. The sad part is that these people are very sincere."

Mrs. Yarris, whose son Glenn is one of the litigants, says, "We've all become paranoid." Some of the Yarris' acquaintances no longer speak to them, she says, and she knows of five families that moved from the school district because of the issue.

Island Trees is a blue collar hamlet an hour's drive from Manhattan. About half the wage earners commute to Manhattan.

Sixty per cent of the homes are the little ranch houses that offered the American dream to young marrieds in the late 40's when they sold for $12,000 or so. Today, they go for $30,000 or more.

Even Island Trees' critics say it's a good place to live. But some now add a touch of bitterness.

"It's a lovely community to live in if you wear blinders and ear plugs and have no children in the school system," says Mrs. Robert Wilson, wife of a Nassau County detective and mother of three.

The Island Trees fight really began in December of 1975. Three members of the school board attended a meeting sponsored by Parents of New York United, a conservative group. They were given a list of books that were deemed objectionable.

Eleven were found in the school library, although "The Fixer" was the only one being used in the curriculum. The others included Kurt Vonnegut's "Slaughterhouse Five," Desmond Morris' "The Naked Ape" and Thomas Piri's "Down These Mean Streets."

The books were yanked before anyone on the school board even read them. Later, a reading committee was appointed and two of the books were returned to the shelves. The committee also voted 6 to 2 to return "The Fixer" but was split on "Slaughterhouse Five" and Eldridge Cleaver's "Soul on Ice." Those books stayed off the shelf.

Soon, school board meetings disintegrated into shouting matches. Copies of offending passages from six of the books were distributed.

Congressman Norman Lent, a Nassau County Republican and supporter of the board's position, garnered headlines when he tried to have the offending passages read into the Congressional Recorda and was turned down on grounds of obscenity.

Meanwhile, the public library in Island Trees suffered a run on the nine banned books. Area college librarians, always looking for a theme, put on "Banned Book" displays.

The New York Times asked three of the authors involved — Malamud, Vonnegut and Morris — to write their impressions of the fray.

Vonnegut finished his this way: "Well, the ACLU or somebody like that will come to the scene of trouble, as they always do. They will explain what is in the Constitution and to whom it applies.

"They will win.

"And there will be millions who are bewildered and heartbroken by the legal victory, who think some things should never be said — especially about religion.

"They are in the wrong place at the wrong time.

"Hi ho."

The fight went to the polls. Two anti-book-banning candidates attempted to unseat incumbents last May but failed by 40 to 50 votes of 2,000 cast.

The American Library Association's Intellectual Freedom Committee keeps track of embroilments over books and finds they're on the increase nationally. Its "Titles Now Troublesome" section includes incidents in a dozen states.

Ira Glasser, executive director of the ACLU, says "the spectre of book-banning is again haunting the land." He ascribes it to "self-appointed vigilantes and ... boards of education without the courage to resist pressure or the insight to understand their educational mission."

Dr. William Haubner, head of the Teachers Rights Division of the National Education Association in Washington, says, "The issue here is the purpose of an American education," says Dr. Haubner. "Is it to indoctrinate students with a given set of values, or is it to create critically thinking human beings who know how to search for truth?"

Others see it differently. M. Stanton Evans, conservative commentator, says "The question here is whether the parents are going to have the major say-so in the molding of a child's psyche. It's a contest between two groups of adults for the paramount influence over children."

Judo helps cop understand young

MENOMONIE, Wis. (AP) — Back in the 1960s, when confrontations with demonstrators became regular happenings in this college town, Chief of Police Ron Hansen realized he was getting a negative opinion of students. So he began throwing them over his shoulder.

Hansen, now 37, became the judo instructor at the University of Wisconsin branch here, and he says the classes have helped him get to know young people better.

University officials say Hansen's class is one of the most popular on campus.

State roundup

Welfare overhaul, amendment advance

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — An industrial revenue bonding proposal, defeated by voters last August, would again be submitted to Missourians under a proposed constiutional amendment given preliminary approval in the state Senate Tuesday.

A $100 re-enlistment bonus for Missouri national guardsmen was also given first-round approval by the upper chamber.

The Missouri House, meanwhile, tentatively approved an overhaul of the state welfare system, including provisions to keep the state from losing at least $4.1 million in federal funds.

That welfare bill would bring the state into compliance with new federal requirements that states set up a program to secure child support payments from fathers who have deserted families who are on welfare.

Last year, the bill died in the Senate when lawmakers refused to succumb to federal pressure. It would also change the method of making welfare payments from a maximum grant system to a percentage-of-need system.

Under the maximum grant plan, any persons qualifying for welfare payments receive a flat amount. The state considers the income of persons eligible for welfare might have under the proposed new system and pays some of the difference between that and certain established levels, depending on the money appropriated for welfare that year.

In sponsoring the bill, Rep. Phil Curls, D-Kansas City, noted the state is currently meeting only about 40 per cent of the need, but could meet about 64 per cent of the need with the same amount of money appropriated if the revision measure is passed.

A higher percentage can be met because money recovered from parents who fail to provide child support is used to increase funding for the program.

Missouri is now the only state that has not complied with the federal requirements, and state officials are scheduled to meet March 15 in Washington with federal officials to determine if the state's program this summer to determine if a support payment recovery plan is in effect and whether to impose the penalty of a reduction in federal funds. Those funds now cover about 60 per cent of Missouri's welfare costs.

The constitutional amendment given first-round approval in the Senate would allow local governing bodies to approve the issuance of industrial revenue bonds without a vote of the people.

Th bonds, which would require no tax increases and which are retired by the revenue collected by those businesses using the facilities constructed with bond proceeds, can only now be issued by a vote of the the people.

A vote of the governing body would be the only requirement under the measure, sponsored by Gladstone Democrat Phil Snowden. Snowden noted Missourians needed another crack at the proposal, because they had been confused over the wording of the amendment on the ballot in the August primary.

National guardsmen would be able to collect $100 each year they re-enlist after a normal six-year tour of duty under the measure sponsored by Sen. Jack Gannon, D-DeSoto. Only $600 could be collected by an individual.

The Senate approved an amendment which calls for elimination of the bonus system in the event the draft is reinstated.

A resolution to amend the state constitution allowing all counties to vote on the charter form of government ran into trouble on the Senate floor when it was successfully amended to require any county adopting it to limit the expansion of its budget to six per cent per year after the charter goes into effect.

Under the state's constitution, a county must have a population of 85,000 to be able to decide whether it wants to choose its own form of government. Only St. Louis and Jackson counties have the charter form of government now.

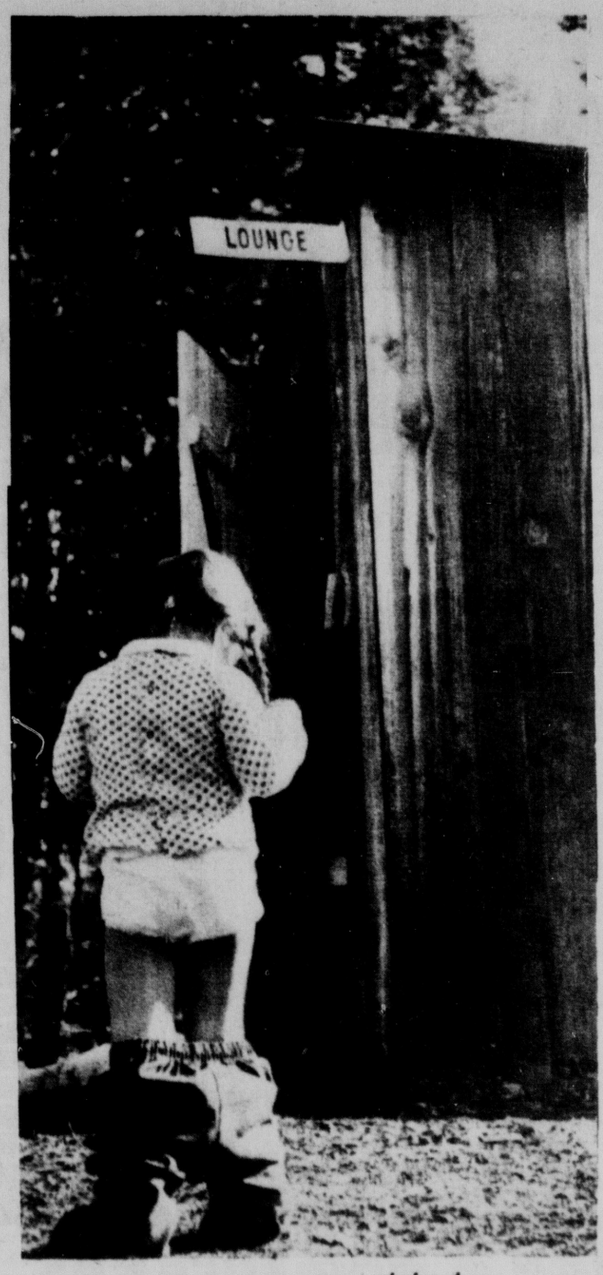
The resolution sought to eliminate the 85,000 population requirement, giving all counties in the state the opportunity to consider county home rule. Under the charter, a county could decide what officers it needs to run government, rather than relying on the Missouri legislature.

Revision of the state's unemployment compensation law to meet new federal guidelinnes gained tentative approval in the House, with critics claiming the proposal should have included provisions to guarantee more efficient adminstration of the jobless benefits program.

The bill, which would take effect in 1978, would bring government employers, domestic employers and agriculture employers under the law's provisions as well as raise the amount of money employers must contribute to support the program.

Failure to comply with the federally-mandated guidelines could cost Missouri employers $190 million in additional federal credits on their contributions plus about $40 million in additional program costs for the state, according to Rep. James Riley, D-Rinhmond Heights.

Increases in employer contributions would be about $35 million a year. But Riley and state labor officials say the increase will still not restore the unemployment compensation trust fund to fiscal soundness.



New interest in old idea

This space-age four-year-old is experiencing the problems of our forefathers because the drought has curtailed the use of modern conveniences at her home near Fall River Mills, a mountain community in California. The water table in the family well has dropped to such a low point the family has been forced to revert to this old outhouse to conserve water. (UPI)

House committee favors school formula changes

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The House Education Committee Tuesday night voted 24-0 to recommend passage of a bill that would revise the formula for distributing state aid to school districts.

Three amendments to the bill were adopted upon recommendaton of a special subcommittee. One of the measures would increase funds to school districts for pupils qualifying under Aid to Dependant Children.

The committee also approved an amendment which would place a floor level on the amount of state aid a school district could receive. Although no districts will lose any state funds the first year that the new formula is used, some of the richer districts could lose funds in subsequent years.

Every district would receive at least $100 per pupil per year and that figure would be adjusted annually with the 1981-1982 school year. Rep. Wayne Goode, D-Normandy, was not pleased with the amendment because he said it compromises the formula anytime a guarantee is put in.

A move by Rep. Carl Muckler, D-Florissant, to offer the amended bill to the House floor as a committee substitute was unsuccessful.

Goode, who has been working on the bill for several years, said he was upset that the committee wanted to offer the substitute. Goode said he could present the bill on the floor with the amendments.

Committee chairman DeVerne Calloway, D-St. Louis, asked Muckler to withdraw his proposal, which he did.

Goode said he was pleased with the bill and he said the favorable committee vote indicates chances for passage of the bill on the House floor are good.

In other committee action Tuesday, the House Revenue Committee endorsed a bill to require mandatory reassessment of property throughout the state to bring all valuations up to 33 per cent level as required by law.

The committee also sent to the full House a bill requiring governmental bodies levying property taxes to rollback prices if property assessments rise more than 10 per cent in a year and limiting governmental efforts to return to the tax rate previously in effect.

The House Urban Affairs Committee sent to the floor income tax deductions of up to $500 for home rehabilitation work. That measure is intended as an incentive for urban residents to fix up deteriorating homes and help rebuild inner city neighborhoods.

The economics committee also sent to the floor for final approval mandatory training standards for all police officers hired after next year. The bill, which would cost about $41,000 was sent to the panel after it received initial House approval to determine if the state could afford it.

Jealous classmates hurl acid at hairdo

LINWOOD, Kan. (AP) — "We just thank God every day that she didn't turn her head when this happened."

That is about the only solace Mrs. Kenneth Tinberg can find in the acid attack on her daughter, Stacey, a pretty 14-year-old cheerleader.

School officials say the attack apparently was made by jealous classmates after the girl did her hair in a style made popular by televison star Farrah Fawcett-Majors.

On St. Valentine's Day the eighth grader was opening her locker at school when another girl dashed nitric acid on her from behind.

Bill Chambers, school principal, thinks the plan was to damage her hair to the point that she would have to get it cut.

Her hairdo was modeled after the style worn by Miss Fawcett-Majors, one of the stars of the "Charlie's Angels" television series. The attack left the girl with burns on her back and shoulder. She also had to restyle her singed hair.

Chambers said he is recommending the girl who threw the acid be expelled. He has also suspended six other girls who he said had talked about the attack with the perpetrator or knew it was coming. He referred the incident to juvenile authorities.

"The hairdo was mentioned prominently in all their statements," Chambers said.

Patrick J. Reardon, Leavenworth County attorney, said Tuesday he is considering what action he might take and may ask for a hearing in juvenile court in a week or two.

Linwood is a town of 354 just west of the Kansas City metropolitan area. Stacey's parents operate a 320-acre farm about 3½ miles east of town.

Congress exempt from discrimination laws

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Although ethics reform is the height of fashion on Capitol Hill these days, Congress is still resolutely clinging to one of its most shameful practices: widespread discrimination in the treatment of its own employes.

With approximately 17,000 workers and a billion-dollar budget, Congress ranks as a big business indeed. Yet, unlike the rest of the government and all of private industry, it remains exempt from laws prohibiting discrimination in employment. Why? Because that's the way it wrote those laws.

Furthermore, the movers and shakers on Capitol Hill show every intention of fighting growing pressures for change.

Just two weeks ago, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and GOP Leader John J. Rhodes asked the Justice Department to intervene on behalf of former Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., in a sex discrimination case now pending in the federal courts.

A three-judge appellate court in New Orleans last month ruled that notwithstanding Congress' efforts to exempt itself from fair employment laws, Passman was not immune from a discrimination suit filed by a former employe he had fired in July 1974 on grounds he wanted to fill her job with a man.

"Our Constitution," the court said, "protects individual rights, even against the mighty."

A struggling group of reformers within the House reacted with astonishment and rage to the discovery that the leadership satraps were seeking Justice Department help in defending Passman's (and their own) right to discriminate. They plan to notify the court that not all members of Congress share this above-the-law attitude.

The group is the House Fair Employment Practices Committee, an unofficial and completely voluntary organization established last year in the wake of the Elizabeth Ray-Wayne Hays sex scandal which focused so much attention on Capitol Hill employment practices.

So far, the committee has cajoled 95 House members into signing a pledge that they will not discriminate by race, sex, religion, age, national origin, handicap, marital or parental status in hiring, paying and promoting their employes.

But that leaves 340 House members free to exercise their biases, not to mention 100 senators who have shown absolutely no interest in reforming their discriminating ways.

"What we have here on Capitol Hill is the last plantation," said Colleen O'Connor, a top staff aide to Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., who is chairing the fair practices panel.

Not a single member of the House leadership has signed the voluntary nondiscrimination pledge. In fact, the bigwigs are doing their best to ignore the existence of the fair practices committee and to make life difficult for the panel by denying it office space, funding and so forth.

"I think they're hoping that we just wear down," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., one of the committee's original organizers. "We had hoped the Passman case would make them realize they're going to have to do something, but apparently not."

"Personnel practices," she added, "are the last thing anyone attends to around here. Employes are treated like lamps or typewriters — you just wear 'em out, turn 'em in and get a new one."

The fair practices panel, however, is about to solicit some hard facts from all 17,000 of those "lamps and typewriters." The committee, using privately contributed funds, is conducting a detailed survey of Capitol Hill employment practices as seen by the drones, not the druids.

"A statistical base is crucial if we're going to convince anyone that change is really needed," O'Connor said. "We're going to build a case for bringing the Congress into the 20th century in terms of employment practices and civil rights."

Idi Amin a blight in Africa

WASHINGTON — Frederick William Cowan, the hulking New Rochelle, N.Y., weight-lifter and gun collector, once wrote in his little Nazi book:

Rowan

"Nothing is lower than black and Jewish people except the police who protect them."

Cowan made headlines across the nation last week by shooting three black co-workers to death along with a dark-skinned native of India. He killed the first policeman on the scene, then wounded four more policemen and a civilian before shooting himself to death.

Cowan died as he had lived: a failure. The man he wanted most to kill, his Jewish boss, had survived by hiding under a desk.

In the wake of this murderous spree you say to yourself, "What if a madman like that ever got real political power?"

Then you remember that occasionally they do. In fact, one of the most monstrous of such killers since Adolf Hitler is on the current scene. He is Idi Amin, president of Uganda since January 1971 when he seized power in a bloodless coup.

The International Commission of Jurists recently estimated that a quarter million Ugandans have been slain on Amin's orders in retaliation for real or imagined plots to throw this imbecilic man out of power.

A new wave of murders is under way in Uganda, the last outrage including the arrest and quick "accidental" deaths last week of Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum and two of Amin's government ministers. They had been accused of plotting to overthrow Amin and died in what Amin's executioners claim was an automobile accident caused when the three accused "tried to escape."

His grotesque crimes against the people of Uganda are more than reason enough for mankind to hold Amin in contempt. But his madness takes on new dimensions when we ponder his impact on efforts to achieve a just and decent world order.

We Americans have tried to turn our backs on the glorifications of "agent 007" and the other dirty tricksters who poison and pillage, murder and maim in the name of patriotism. But the deeds of Amin are so heinous that much of mankind will say that agents from Kenya, Great Britain, the U.S. or elsewhere have justifiable reason to topple him, even murder him.

Amin gives alibi and shelter to other racist oppressors and killers around the world. A representative of South Africa, where the ruling Afrikaaners have put a fine refinement on repression, persecution, torture and murder, offered this simple defense in responding to one of my recent columns: instead of writing about us, why doesn't Rowan write about Idi Amin?

As long as Amin is in power, people of racist and colonial mentalities will cite him as moral justification for their support of the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia, the Afrikaaner regime that has an iron grip on South Africa and Namibia.

"Why replace white minority rule with black dictatorship?" they ask.

The implication is that all African leaders inevitably run toward the semi-insanity of Idi Amin. Which is as absurd as someone suggesting that all white Christians tend toward the black-hating, Jew-baiting neo-Nazism of Frederick William Cowan.

There must be some moral way for the human race to deny power to an Idi Amin and to protect himself from the mad rampages of emotional freaks like Cowan. If we find it, perhaps then reasonably sane men and women can focus on the real issues of how we all survive while sharing this global powderkeg called earth.

Warnke hearings: the doubts persist

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has approved Paul Warnke for two crucial positions in the area of disarmament. President Carter had nominated Warnke to be director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and also to be chief negotiator with the Soviets in the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT).

We have expressed our grave misgivings about Warnke in the past. Although Warnke managed to back off in Senate hearings from virtually every position he has taken on disarmament in recent years, and has even started sounding like something of a hawk, our doubts remain.

Now Warnke is maintaining that he is concerned over the rapid Soviet military build-up. But this build-up is not really news, and has been going on now for some time. Yet less than a year ago Warnke was peddling his old familiar theme that the U.S. should junk numerous strategic weapons systems and not be unduly concerned if the Russians fail to follow suit. Warnke even called into serious question the validity of the nation's Triad strategic concept, which calls for capabilities in manned aircraft and land- and submarine-launched missiles.

In reference to his disastrous 1972 defense recommendations on behalf of Sen. George McGovern's presidential campaign, Warnke told the senators that in view of developments since then, he no longer favors such cuts. The real point is what if McGovern had been elected and Warnke's views had been put into effect? Where would we be today? Is this the kind of judgment we want sitting across the table from the Russians?

The inconsistency between the old and new Warnke was not missed by veteran SALT negotiator and former secretary of the Navy Paul Nitze, the lone witness to testify against Warnke before the Foreign Relations Committee.

Nitze said Warnke favored dangerously large cuts in U.S. defense spending, took an "absolutely asinine" approach to bargaining with the Russians, and that Warnke in testimony had not been "honest or consistent in saying what his views were."

Something of a voice-crying-in-the-wilderness award should go to our junior senator, John Danforth, for voting against Warnke on the Senate committee and for single-handedly insisting on Nitze's expert testimony so the other side could at least get on the record.

Short of a successful filibuster, which seems unlikely, Warnke will be approved by the Senate. Jimmy Carter, who says he agrees with Warnke's thinking, will get his way, and McGovernism will have been institutionalized in two areas of the federal government that are crucial to the nation's security.

"It LOOKS like he knows what he's doing."

Merry-go-round

No human decency in old Dixie prison

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — For the prisoners of Parchman, slavery was abolished a century late. Not until the early 1970s were they freed from the work gangs that toiled from sunrise to sunset, without pay, in the Mississippi cotton fields. Gun-toting overseers supervised the work and did not hesitate to shoot a man dead if he tried to flee.

Parchman Prison consists of some old plantation camps, which rise out of the cotton fields and quickly slump back into them. The prisoners no longer are forced to work but they are still housed in bleak barracks not much better than the bygone slave quarters. Indeed, a federal court has found the living conditions "unfit for human habitation by any standard of decency."

We sent our roving reporter, Hal Bernton, to this forgotten corner of America to investigate the conditions. He spent nearly two weeks inside the prison. He was processed through the reception center, assigned a number and issued a set of prison clothes.

The arrangements were made by Dr. Allen Ault, who took charge of the Mississippi prison system two months ago. Previously, he brought reforms to Georgia's tension-ridden prisons while Jimmy Carter was the governor. Now Ault is introducing similar reforms in Mississippi.

In the past, Parchman was run by the "good ol' boys," a term of affection and respect applied to the men who used to dominate Southern politics. They used the prison labor force to raise cotton for the state and to grow the prison's food supply. Women inmates canned the food, and the meat was prepared at a nearby slaughterhouse. But the best cuts never made it to the prisoners' table; they wound up mysteriously in the homes of favored Mississippi politicians.

Now the processing plants have fallen into disrepair, the barracks have been condemned and a new day is dawning. But for the next few months, the prisoners are still shoehorned into the rundown barracks.

Bernton felt a pervasive, suffocating feeling of claustrophobia as he entered the crowded quarters. The prisoners bunk together in two large "cages" on opposite sides of the barracks. Each cramped cage holds over 80 prisoners. A court order is supposed to guarantee each prisoner 50 square feet of living space. But Bernton and his cellmates had closer to 22 square feet apiece.

Occasionally, rats scurried across the floor. Electrical wires lay exposed. Sinks and toilets regularly overflowed because of faulty plumbing, causing a horrible stench.

As Bernton bedded down for the night, he watched a black inmate in a bright red shirt straightening his hair with a hot comb. A barechested man wearing a gold cross around his neck was ironing his pants; he explained that the prison laundry never returned some of his clothes. A huddle of men around a television set watched an old Bing Crosby movie. Another grim group played poker.

It's the lack of work that has now become the curse of Parchman. Most of them want to work, because they can reduce their sentence by a day for every day they work. But there isn't enough work to go around. Two-thirds also lack the education to qualify for high school or vocational training programs. So throughout the long winter months, they just lounge around.

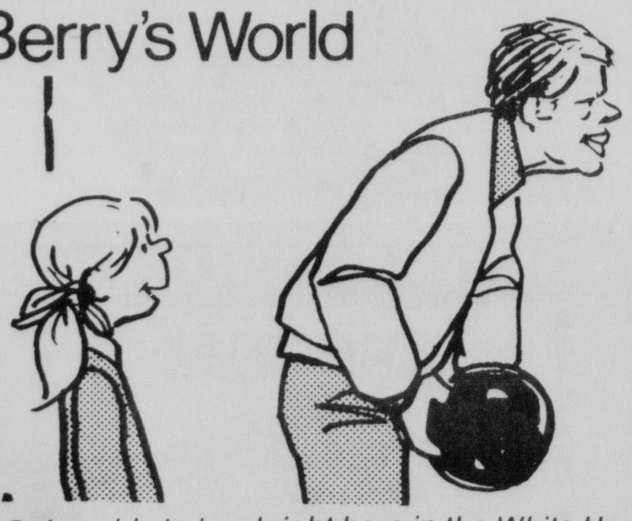
One poured out his frustration to Bernton. "It gets hard lazing around the cage with all the tension and all the noises of the radio, televisions and card games. There's little ventilation. With the windows closed, it's like a smoke-filled barroom. You go through that for several months, and finally you wake up one day on the wrong side of the bed. Someone slaps you, and a fight breaks out."

When a scuffle erupts, the hall guards dare not intervene until security reinforcements arrive. By that time, a man may be killed or raped. It has happened.

In this dehumanizing atmosphere, each prisoner tried to add some small personal touch to his tiny living space. The Black Muslims took over a corner of the cage and taped to the wall a faded photo of their sad-faced prophet, Elijah. Despite the constant, mind-dulling blare of radio, television and poker, they quietly bowed down every morning to pray.

One Muslim minister, a firm believer in physical exercise, did sit-ups and push-ups on his bed. In the afternoon, when the inmates were let out of the cage, he took Bernton jogging around the fenced-in grounds. They had to dodge pools of sewage. Other inmates played basketball on a muddy, makeshift court.

Bernton found a thriving black market of goods and services inside Parchman. Sugar from the camp kitchens is siphoned off by inmate cooks into secret caches, which are later sold. Some is mixed with peaches, yeast or fruit cocktail to form a crude, bootleg brew called "buck." To prevent the brewing of buck, prison officials actually chopped down a peach orchard.



"Being able to bowl right here in the White House is really fun — particularly when I'M WINNING!"

Study about U. S. Senate food for trivia players

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Senate, often labeled the world's greatest deliberative body, starts late in the day, quits after less than seven hours and prefers not to work weekends — or Mondays or Friday either, for that matter.

A taxpayer-funded Commission on the Operation of the Senate spent 15 months and $500,000 delving into the work habits of the Senate and recommending changes. It published its findings in a 49-page booklet with a ponderous name unlikely to make anyone's best seller list.

But the "Legislative Activity Sourcebook: United States Senate," may emerge as prime reading for trivia lovers.

Some glimpses:

—The Senate was in session 1,180 hours and 45 minutes in 1975, an average of 6 hours and 38 minutes for each day it met.

—Most sessions were on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and the fewest were on Friday.

—Only a dozen times all year were senators called on to meet before 9 a.m. On 54 occasions, the Senate convened at noon, or later.

—On 15 occasions, the Senate day ended before 2 p.m. But more often sessions lasted until between 4 p.m. and 7 p.m., and 26 times, the Senate didn't finish for the day until after 8 p.m.

The report also studied the operation of Senate committees, where legislation is hatched. It found that not all committees are equal.

For example:

—The Appropriations Committee, which considers budgets for all government departments and agencies, met 318 times, the most of any panel.

—The Joint Committee on the Library, scarcely a workhorse, chose a Friday in November for its only session of the year. Report writers omitted what business was transacted.

—Ditto the Joint Committee on Printing, which got together on a Monday in February, and the Joint Committee on Congressional Bicentennial Arrangements, which found time for its only meeting on a Thursday in September.

Eating out

Living up to the motto of their organization, "eat out often," Lloyd Stephenson, left, president of the Missouri Restaurant Association, and John Vanosdoll, president of the group's west-central chapter, ate out at the West Central Chapter meeting in Sedalia Tuesday at Pearl's Harbour, South Highway 65. Stephenson told the group that the future of the food service industry in Missouri is bright, with profits of restaurants expected to reach $1.5 billion this year.

St. Louis request denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A request aimed at freeing St. Louis school officials from a possible court-ordered school desegregation plan has been turned down by the U.S. Supreme Court.

By a split four-four vote, the Justices Tuesday refused to temporarily set aside a ruling by the Eighth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that allowed a civil rights group to intervene in the case.

In seeking to enter the case, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had contended that the city's voluntary desegregation plan did not go far enough.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, who had served as chief counsel for the NAACP before being appointed to the high court, did not participate in Tuesday's vote.

Although the court's action carried little immediate impact for St. Louis schools, it could be interpreted as offering some encouragement to school officials if they decide to seek full review by the high court.

Five votes are needed to approve the type of request turned down Tuesday. But the votes of only four justices are needed to grant full review.

In 1972, school officials began working under the aegis of a federal court in planning a voluntary school desegregation program.

An agreement for a voluntary plan, which includes "magnet schools" which attempt to draw students from both largely black and largely white schools, was about to be reached last month when the NAACP sought to intervene.

The NAACP contended that extensive cross-city busing is necessary to end the city's practice of fostering predominantly black schools and predominantly white schools.

The U.S. District Court in St. Louis rejected the group's attempt to intervene, but the circuit court ruled last December that the NAACP could enter the case.

School officials told the Supreme Court this week they would seek review of the appeals court's ruling so that the city could continue planning for its voluntary desegregation program, which is supposed to take effect by next September.

Legislative breakfast plans made

The annual Sedalia Chamber of Commerce legislative breakfast, this year to feature local State Rep. James Mathewson and State Sen. John Ryan, will be held at 7:30 a.m. March 11 at the Ramada Inn, it was announced Tuesday.

Mathewson and Ryan will inform persons at the breakfast of the status of certain legislation being considered by the State Legislature. Other items of interest regarding the current General Assembly in Jefferson City also will be discussed by the two men.

Tickets for the breakfast may be reserved by contacting Chamber Secretary Diane Noe, 826-2222.

Entertainnment by piano for club here

Piano performances by Mary Jo Antibus and Shelly Harding, members of the Helen G. Steele Music Club, highlighted the weekly meeting Tuesday of the Sedalia Noon Optimist Club at the Bothwell Hotel.

The two women performed both solos and duets.

In club business, it was announced that the Optimist zone oratorical contest will be held Saturday at State Fair Community College. It was also announced that the Tri-Star basketball competition will get underway Saturday at the Sedalia Community Center.

New members initiated Tuesday were David Routszong, John Blair and Don Ward. Special guests at the meeting were Jim Kueck, John Blair and Ray Haley.

Actress will be guest at meeting

Mrs. Winn Riley, an actress with the Jefferson City Community Theater, will be a guest at a meeting of the Sedalia Community Theater organization at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Farm and Home Savings Building, Fourth and Osage.

Mrs. Riley is a leading actress in the Jefferson City community theater, having appeared as Mame in "Auntie Mame," as well as in many other leading roles.

The newly-organized local community theater organization will stage its first play May 26-27 at Convention Hall. The play has not yet been selected.

All persons interested in participating in this community-wide effort are encouraged to attend this meeting.

Six inmates escape from Moberly prison

MOBERLY, Mo. (AP) — Authorities in central Missouri are searching for six inmates who apparently fled the Missouri Medium Security Prison Tuesday evening.

Superintendent Carl White said the men apparently cut through a 12-foot fence, then scaled an outer 8-foot fence. He said the escapees would have to be considered dangerous.

A guard in one of the towers saw two inmates scaling the outer fence about 6:55 p.m., White said. An inmate count was completed and six men were found to be missing.

White said a hole large enough for a man to crawl through had been cut in the inner fence. A search began immediately both inside and outside the prison, but White said he was going on the assumption the six missing men had made it to the outside.

Prison officials, Moberly police, highway patrol officers and the Randolph County Sheriff's office joined in the manhunt.

White identified the escapees as:

Gary Yarbrough, 24, serving seven years from Ozark County for armed robbery and jail break.

Jeffrey Allen Taylor, 20, serving three years from Greene County for second degree burglary and stealing.

William J. Schnieder, 22, serving five years from Jackson County for second-degree burglary.

Larry Dean Collins, 22, serving five years from Barry County for first-degree robbery.

Dennis Keith Dittman, 23, serving five years from Maries County for receiving stolen property.

Randy Ralston, 20, serving eight years from Shelby County for second-degree burglary and auto theft.

Birthright is explained to local club

A presentation by Mrs. Cynthia Kneibert on Birthright, a local counseling service for women with unwanted pregnancies, highlighted the weekly meeting Tuesday of the Sedalia Sunrise Optimist Club at Sambo's Restaurant.

Mrs. Kneibert explained the origin of the service and how it functions in Sedalia. She also discussed the persons who volunteer their time and efforts to the service. Birthright offers the donated services of a registered nurse, minister and a corps of volunteer workers who listen to telephone calls from persons requesting help or seeking information. The number to call for free Birthright services and counseling is 826-9060.

In club business, Don Maples reported on the club's sweetheart dinner and Lee Moran volunteered to head the club's community project committee. The Optimist district zone oratorical contest will be held at 6:30 p.m. Saturday at State Fair Community College.

Water grant to Polo

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The federal government has allocated $237,500 in community development funds to help the town of Polo, Mo. overcome its water shortage problems.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development advised Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, (D-Mo), of the action Tuesday.

HUD officials said they will go to Polo to sign the contract for the grant at 2 p.m. Friday.

Polo is a town of 438 in northwest Missouri, which has had dry crop seasons for the past three years and comparatively no moisture since last summer. The five shallow wells of the municipal water system could not keep up with demand, and Polo has hauled 5,000 to 10,000 gallons a day since June.

A crisis developed during bitter cold weather in January when frozen pipes caused leaks in the distribution system, the tank truck broke down briefly and some of the neighboring towns which were helping Polo ran shy of water themselves.

The $237,500 will cover most of the cost of drilling two deep wells about nine miles north of Polo where there is a much more productive water strata.

The Social Security Act was signed in August 1935.

SWEET SPRINGS — Kaysinger Conference teams dominated action in the boys 1A basketball regional here Tuesday night, winning all three first-round games.

Seventh-seeded Sacred Heart beat Leeton 60-46; second-seeded Green Ridge downed Calhoun 101-53; and sixth-seeded Lincoln humbled Chilhowee 67-37.

Lincoln used Chilhowee turnovers to their advantage early in the first quarter, and scored eight straight points enroute to an 18-9 first quarter lead.

The Cardinals placed three people in double figures for the evening, led by John Keehn's 17 points.

Lincoln held a 33-15 halftime lead, and padded that to 21 points, 46-25, at the end of the third quarter.

The Cardinals just coasted in in the fourth period.

Green Ridge made patsies out of the Calhoun Eagles from the very start of their game. The Tigers ran up a 17-2 lead early in the first quarter, and closed out the period with a whopping 29-12 advantage.

The Eagles closed the gap to 13 points at the half, 45-32, but a 32-point third quarter for Green Ridge gave them a 77-43 lead and put the game out of reach.

Scurrying to break the 100-point barrier, Green Ridge's Robert Curtis made a short bank shot with 23 seconds remaining in the game, giving his team a 101-50 lead.

Jackie Rodewald led Green Ridge with 21 points. Calhoun was topped by Ben Steas' 14.

Sacred Heart took the lead against Leeton with 39 seconds left in the first quarter when Mel Simon connected on a one-and-one free throw, and they were never to trail again.

The free throws made the score 10-8, then the Gremlins poured in another eight straight to take a ten-point edge.

Leeton pulled within three points late in the quarter with seven straight points of their own, but the half ended with Sacred Heart ahead 24-19.

Leeton couldn't catch up in the third quarter, as each team traded buckets throughout the period. Bruce Dooley finally opened up the game with four points at the end of the third quarter.

In the fourth quarter, Sacred Heart opened up, hitting on free throw opportunities, and finally secured the 60-46 decision.

Dooley led all scorers with 24 points.

Action continues tonight, beginning with a final first-round game that pits third-seeded Kingsville against LaMonte at 6 p.m.

Then quarter-final action starts, with eighth-seeded Smithton playing top-seeded Concordia at 7:30 p.m., and fifth-seeded Santa Fe and fourth-seeded Cole Camp at 9:00.

Barons nearing journey's end?

CLEVELAND (AP) — The end of the roller coaster ride appeared to be at hand today for the Cleveland Barons, with the National Hockey League's Board of Governors expected to decide the fate of the franchise.

The board was scheduled to meet today in New York, following the disclosure here Tuesday night by Chairman John Ziegler that the league's most likely option was to dissolve the franchise by assigning the players' contracts to other teams.

Seventeen of the 27 Barons still under contract to the beleaguered franchise met here Tuesday. They gathered first with Alan Eagleson, executive director of the National Hockey League Players Association, then with Ziegler and fellow board member William Wirtz.

Following those meetings, Ziegler said: "There are three options open at this point. First, there is the possibility of the sale of the team. Secondly, there is the possibility of the league taking over the franchise, and there is the possibility of winding down the franchise, which would include assignments of the players' contracts to other teams.

"The first two possibilities seem remote at this time, but remain possibilities," Ziegler added.

Eagleson said, "The players tried for three weeks to keep the franchise alive. They played without pay and without contract protection. I can no longer persuade them to play, nor would I do so. They are risking their futures and their careers.

"The players have decided, unless their contracts are guaranteed properly and their salaries guaranteed properly for the rest of the year by someone other than the current management, they would not play," Eagleson said.

Last Friday, after he failed to meet the Feb. 15 payroll, the Barons gave majority owner Mel Swig an ultimatum to sell the team or pay them back salary owed by noon Tuesday, or they would declare themselves free agents. Eagleson said it had been determined the Barons could not now gain free agent status but would likely opt for retirement status until a solution is reached.

The Barons said they would refuse to play the game scheduled here tonight against the Buffalo Sabres.

The Barons played nine years in Oakland, Calif., as the California Golden Seals before being transferred to Cleveland in July, 1976.

Braves steal one from Suns

By The Associated Press

When you are losing by a point in the final seconds and the other team has the ball, usually the best thing you can do in the National Basketball Association is foul.

Coach Joe Mullaney of the Buffalo Braves thought of that obvious strategy Tuesday night, but Randy Smith had a better idea: steal the ball.

That is what the Buffalo guard did and that is how the Braves wound up with an exciting 115-114 victory over the Phoenix Suns.

"He tried to pass the ball and I was fortunate to deflect it," said Smith after grabbing Paul Westphal's pass, racing down the court and scoring the winning basket with seven seconds remaining.

"We wanted Westphal to handle the ball," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod, "but then Randy jumped in between the ball and Ricky Sobers and made the steal."

Before Smith picked off Westphal's intended pass to Sobers, Mullaney had instructed Adrian Dantley to foul Phoenix' Keith Erickson. But nothing happened.

"Dantley was rying to foul Erickson in the corner," said Mullaney. "I looked over there and the official saw Dantley getting Erickson around the waist. I guess he felt it was too obvious and ignored it."

MacLeod, naturally, was sorry that the foul call was not made.

"I sure wish they would have called the foul," said MacLeod. "We thought they'd foul and we had all our good foul shooters in there."

Smith finished with 36 points, while Phoenix' Alvan Adams scored 47 points, grabbed 18 rebounds and had 12 assists.

In the other NBA games, the Portland Trail Blazers nipped the Boston Celtics 113-111, the Denver Nuggets trimmed the Houston Rockets 118-106, the Chicago Bulls hammered the Golden State Warriors 118-102, the San Antonio Spurs turned back the Los Angeles Lakers 135-103, and the New York Knicks tripped the New Orleans Jazz 119-102.

Trail Blazers 113, Celtics 111

Maurice Lucas and Larry Steele hit key baskets in the final minute and Lionel Hollins scored 43 points, lifting Portland over Boston. Lucas' jumper from the side with 1:05 remaining gave the Blazers the lead at 111-109 and Steele hit from the corner with 24 seconds remaining, providing them with a 113-109 advantage.

Nuggets 118, Rockets 106

Bobby Jones connected on all six of his first-period shots as Denver bolted to a 22-point lead, then held off a Houston rally. Dan Issel led the winners with 22 points.

Bulls 118, Warriors 102

Artis Gilmore scored 24 points and three teammates contributed 19 each, leading Chicago over Golden State. Mickey Johnson, Wilbur Holland and Scott May each scored 19 points for the Bulls.

Spurs 135, Lakers 103

George Gervin, Larry Kenon and Coby Dietrick combined for 58 points, leading San Antonio over Los Angeles. Gervin finished with 25 points, Kenon 17 and Dietrick 16.

Knicks 119, Jazz 102

Bob McAdoo scored 27 points and Earl Monroe 23 as the Knicks handed New Orleans its fifth consecutive loss.

Maryland edges ACC foe 81-80

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Carl Tacy was truly wounded by Brad Davis' shot.

"It was a tough loss, considering the importance of the game," said the Wake Forest basketball coach after a stinging 81-80 defeat by Maryland Tuesday night.

The Terps, longshots in the Atlantic Coast Conference game, needed only a short shot to win it — Davis' eight-foot jumper in the closing seconds.

"The difference between winning and losing a game like this," sighed Tacy, "is keeping control of the ball at the end of the game."

Actually, Wake Forest had control at the end, but Skip Brown missed a 35-foot shot. As a result, the 11th-ranked Demons were unable to cement their grip on first place in the ACC.

Ironically, the last time the teams met, at College Park, Md., Wake Forest beat Maryland with a shot at the end.

"The fans sure got their money's worth, didn't they?" said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell. "Both teams played well enough to win. We were running a play for Davis on that last shot with a pick set on the high post. It was a big win for us. I thought we were just super."

Elsewhere Tuesday night, sixth-ranked Arkansas nipped Texas A&M 63-62, 10th-ranked Louisville whipped Northeast Louisiana 95-65, and 12th-rated Providence stopped Villanova 84-71.

Ron Brewer scored 22 points as Arkansas defeated Texas A&M and finished the regular season in the Southwest Conference with a 16-0 record, the first SWC team to go unbeaten in 20 years. The SWC frontrunners improved their over-all record to 25-1 while winning their first game at College Station, Tex., since 1959.

Rick Wilson scored 22 points and Darrell Griffith had 20, leading Louisville's rout of Northeast Louisiana. The victory was the 20th for the Cardinals.

Joe Hassett's 26 points led four Providence players in double figures as the Friars defeated Villanova in the first game of a doubleheader at the Palestra in Philadelphia. In the second game, Penn beat La Salle 80-70 behind Kevin McDonald's 32 points.

In other games, Napolean Gaither and Ken Harris combined for 35 second-half points, lifting Drake past Wichita State 88-78; Ed Jordan and Hollis Copeland each had 22 points, pacing Rutgers over Fordham 98-73; Mike Russell's 28 points led Texas Tech to a 64-62 triumph over SMU; Cornell whipped Yale 73-56 as Bernard Vaughn, Cedric Carter and Kevin Halloran combined for 50 points.

Also, Jeryl Salmond came off the bench and sparked a second-half rally that carried VMI past Randolph-Macon 81-75; Jim Krivacs and Ron Baxter teamed for 52 points, powering Texas over Rice 90-51, and Dayton turned back Biscayne 82-60 behind Jim Paxson's 20 points.

Baseball contract activity

Garvey signs six-year pact

By The Associated Press

Steve Garvey, Dave LaRoche and Paul Lindblad all have signed baseball contracts, but they seem to be headed in different directions.

Garvey has found a home in Los Angeles, LaRoche expects to be traded from the Cleveland Indians and Lindblad is up in the air at Texas.

"I feel a part of the family, and it's great to know I have the opportunity to finish my career with the Dodgers," the 28-year-old Garvey said after signing a six-year contract Tuesday.

Although terms were not disclosed, Garvey's agent, Jerry Kapstein, said that negotiations were conducted on the "highest level," adding that it was a pleasure to negotiate with the Dodgers.

Garvey, a one-time Most Valuable Player in the National League, appeared in all 162 games last year for Los Angeles and hit .317, drove in 80 runs and rapped 13 homers.

LaRoche was hardly as happy as Garvey, signing a one-year contract with the Indians under protest. The left-handed reliever said he signed the one-year contract originally offered by Cleveland "so I can become a free agent at the end of this year and not have to take a 20 per cent pay cut for playing out my option."

Under the new baseball contract, there will be no option year in contracts signed now and in the future.

Lindblad said he had agreed to terms with the Texas Rangers, but the 12-year veteran relief pitcher added that the agreement "cannot become official until Bowie Kuhn has okayed this."

And, that lodges the script for a possible repeat confrontation between Oakland owner Charles O. Finley and baseball Commissioner Kuhn. Finley sold Lindblad to Texas last weekend for $400,000 and is threatening to take Kuhn to court again if the commissioner voids the sale in the "best interest of baseball" as he did in another Finley deal last summer.

The A's owner said Tuesday night that Lindblad has come to terms with the Rangers, and that their owner has refused Kuhn's request to discuss the deal. Kuhn has said he plans a hearing on the sale, and a spokesman for the commissioner said approval of the sale would be withheld until afterward.

While all this action was going on off the field, the California Angels were among three teams opening spring training Tuesday. And Manager Norm Sherry promised his players that it would not be easy.

"Our goal is to come out of here in the best shape possible," Sherry said Tuesday as he welcomed his players to their first day in camp.

Six California players remained unsigned as the American League team opened spring training in Holtville, Calif. — pitcher Sid Monge, infielders Dave Chalk and Mario Guerrero and outfielders Bruce Bochte, Danny Briggs and Gil Flores.

Also opening camp Tuesday were the Minnesota Twins and the Houston Astros.

Manager Gene Mauch sent 27 players through a three-hour workout as the Twins opened spring training in near-perfect 70-degree weather in Orlando, Fla.

The Astros had 17 pitchers and eight catchers report to their first day of camp in Houston.

Vachon turns tables on Blues' Johnston

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When one goaltender praises his opposite number, it is time to sit up and take notice, especially when the goalie with the nice words is on a hot streak himself.

Following his last two games, St. Louis goalie Eddie Johnston had been the talk of the National Hockey League, but Tuesday night he was beaten 4-0 by Los Angeles' Rogie Vachon, and Johnston began passing out compliments.

"I thought I was hot," said Johnston, who had a string of 115 consecutive scoreless minutes snapped, "but Rogie has been playing tremendous hockey. When he's hot like that I don't think there's anybody better in the league.

"I saw him in the Canada Cup series when he was named most valuable player, and he deserved that."

Although the Montreal Canadiens have lost only seven of their 61 games this season—and are working on a 15-game unbeaten streak—Johnston says that "anything can happen in the playoffs, especially if Rogie is hot like that."

Vachon posted his third shutout in his last four games, his second in a row and fifth in his last 11 games in beating the Blues for the second time this season.

Four second-period goals were all he needed, including Marcel Dionne's 37th of the season.

Vachon now has six shutouts this season, one shy of his club record. The 5-foot-7, 166-pounder has allowed only 19 goals in his last 11 games.

"I had a lot of help tonight," said Vachon. "They had some great chances in the first 30 minutes, but the puck just didn't go in. It's nice to see our defensemen taking their men out at the blue line and the forwards coming back on defense."

At 14, reminiscent of Evert

NEW YORK (AP) — Tracy Austin grinned, revealing a row of glistening braces on her teeth.

Her brownish hair was tied in pigtails, which fell to her shoulders. She nervously picked away at a bowl of vanilla ice cream and took gulps from a king-sized glass of milk.

"I am in a hurry to get home," she said. "I have so much school work to make up. I'm way behind on my algebra and I haven't had a chance to do any reading up on the Civil War. That's social studies.

"My other two subjects are English and Spanish. I don't have to work as hard on them."

Tracy is the newest wonder child of the mushrooming sport of tennis — already at the tender age of 14 being hailed as the "new Chris Evert."

"I don't think they should call me the new Chris Evert," she said, a blush showing behind her faceful of freckles. "I consider it a compliment. Chris is my idol. I like Billie Jean King, too. But I don't think you can compare me with anybody. I'm just me."

Who is "just me?"

Tracy Austin is a phenomenal wisp of a girl, only five feet and an inch tall and weighing 90 pounds. A big gust of wind could blow her right off the court.

Yet she astounded the tennis world recently by knocking off Greer Stevens, an established player, and giving the veteran Rosemary Casals the fight of her life in a pro tournament in Los Angeles.

Tracy also has been beating opponents in the 18-year bracket, her latest triumph coming in a 6-3, 7-6 victory over top-seeded Mareen Louie of San Francico Sunday at Port Washington, N.Y.

"She is amazing," said Julie Heldman, once third-ranked among U.S. women players. "She hits the ball harder than most women much older and much stronger. She is very fast on the court and is not afraid to take the net where she is an excellent volleyer." Like Miss Evert, Tracy is a right-hander who hits a two-fisted backhand.

Tracy is the sprite of a tennis-playing family from Rolling Hills, Calif., a 45-minute freeway drive from Los Angeles. Her father, George, is in space technology and plays regularly with his wife, Jeanne. Tracy's older sister, Pam, 26, is on the tour, and her three brothers, Jeff, Doug and John, she says "all are better than I am."

The Austin family has some 400 tennis trophies strewn all over the place at home.

Although she plays in women's tournaments and qualifies for the rich purses, Tracy said she remains an amateur — a novelty in the current structure of the game.

"I give all the money back," she says. "So far this year I would have won $8,000 if I had taken the money. But I only take expenses."

Her plans are to finish high school, she said, and then perhaps turn professional, mixing tournament tennis with college.

"I don't care about money. I want to finish school and then I want to be No. 1 in the world."

NU could mount track challenge

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Nebraska track coach Frank Sevigne says with some good times and distances and a little luck his team could be a serious challenger in the 49th annual Big 8 Indoor Track Championships Friday and Saturday at the N.U. Sports Center.

Last year, Kansas State won the title and the Huskers placed fifth. This year, Kansas and Oklahoma are favored, with Missouri, Kansas State and the Cornhuskers listed as heavy challengers for upper division berths.

Nebraska's best chance for title winners in the running events are in the 60-yard low and high hurdles, the 600, 900 and 1,000 yard runs and the mile relay. In the field, Nebraska's Neville Murray, with a triple jump of 49-9¼, leads the league, while Kansas' Mike Wilk is second with a jump of 49-2½.

In the hurdles, the Huskers will be paced by Jeff Lee, who has the top time in the lows and is a solid contender in the highs. In the lows, Lee's mark of :06.6 is ahead of Oklahoma's John Garrison, the defending champ, who has a time of :06.7.

In the highs, Lee has a mark of :07.1, which is under the NCAA qualifying time of :07.2. The Big 8's top high hurdle time is :07.07, by Kansas' Anthony Coleman.

In the 600 and 800 yard runs, N.U. is led by freshman Scott Poehling. In the 600, his time of 1:09.8 is tops in the league and under the NCAA qualifying time of 1:10.3. Poehling's challengers in the 600 will be Jay Wagner of Kansas, with a time of 1:10.4, and Kansas State's Bob Prince, the defending champ, with a time of 1:11.1.

Poehling's time in the 800 is 1:51.7, which also is tops in the conference and under the national qualifying mark of 1:52.2. His top competition should come from Nebraska's Paul McClain, Ron Fisher and Jeff Thurman. Prince, who also is the defending champ in the 800, has a best of 1:53.8.

In the 1,000 yard run, the Huskers' Matt Reckmeyer has the league's second best time of 2:10.4. The conference's top mark is held by Rick Ensz of Kansas, with a time of 2:10.0.

Nebraska's mile relay time of 3:14.7 is tied with Kansas for the Big 8's best effort. Earlier in the season, Kansas beat Nebraska's mile relay team 3:14.8-3:15.3.

Taylor to Rams

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Lionel Taylor, senior member of the Pittsburgh Steelers' coaching staff, has resigned to accept a coaching position with the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League.

Taylor, 40, has been the Steelers' receiver coach since 1970.

He played pro football for 11 years, mostly with the Denver Broncos, and was the first pro ever to have 100 receptions in a single season.

Ramirez wins

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Second-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico scored a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Butch Walts in a $250,000 tournament.

Dips lose three

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Dips will be without the services this season of three players who led them to the North American Soccer League playoffs last year.

Forward Paul Cannell, who led the team in scoring last season, along with defenders Tony Macken and Tom McConville, will be unavailable because of the long English season and financial considerations.

Derek Jefferson, another defender, also will be lost to the Dips for similar reasons.

Creativity name of the dunking game

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Return of the dunk to college basketball this year has brought about a new high in creative shooting.

There have been the two-handed dunks, one-handed dunks, twirling dunks, helicopter-hanging dunks, over-the-head dunks and an assortment of wild hybrids.

The players are turning on crowds—and themselves.

"I love it," says UCLA's David Greenwood. "It adds a new dimension to the game."

"If it comes at the right time," adds teammate Marques Johnson, "it can really demoralize the other team."

"The dunk shot really gets your adrenalin flowing," says Bruce "Sky" King of Iowa. "It makes you feel good. It's a crowd-pleaser and a momentum-changer."

The UCLA players, many of whom were in grade school when the dunk was banned from college basketball in the late 1960s, are downright artistic in their approach to the newly legalized shot.

"Like I'll come along the baseline with the ball cupped in my hand and go all the way under the hoop, then spin around," Greenwood says. "If no one else can do it for a week, that's fine."

The University of San Francisco and Louisville are two other teams who rate high among the dunkers. James Hardy, whose specialty is the "squeak dunk," leads the top-ranked Dons in dunking technique. Hardy rubs the ball against the glass backboard before slamming it through the basket.

"The dunk makes you want to hold onto the rim, stay up there with your adrenalin flowing," Hardy points out. "You want to run, to jump. You can't wait for the next one."

At Louisville, the Cardinals use the shot so often that they've picked up the collective sobriquet, "The Doctors of Dunk."

Unlike players, the nation's coaches do not embrace the dunk philosophy as passionately, although a sampling of their opinion seems to favor the rule's rebirth.

"From the fans' standpoint, the rule is good," says Kentucky's Joe Hall. "It's an exciting play, like the long pass in football. But as a coach, I have to wonder about its value. Because the fans love it, it puts pressure on the players to look for the dunk where it is not desirable. And that means more charging violations and missed layups."

"I think it is basically good for the game, but it is frustrating at times from the coach's standpoint, particularly if the player misses a shot," says Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "(But) the players and the fans love it—and that's who the game is for."

Adolph Rupp, the former Kentucky coach, also seems to walk the center line in his thinking.

Coach of Year

ORANGEBURG, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina State College's Tim Autry, who led the Bulldogs to their first regular-season conference championship this season, has been named Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference Basketball Coach of the Year.

Autry, in his fourth year as head coach at S.C. State, guided the Bulldogs to a 10-2 league record and a 15-10 overall mark.

South should have raised two notrump to three instead of bidding three diamonds. He had honors in all suits and no singleton. His three-diamond bid got him to four spades and gave Alan Sontag and Peter Weichsel a chance for some successful razzle-dazzle defense.

It started with trick one. Peter opened the deuce of hearts. The five was played from dummy and Alan falsecarded with the queen. The play couldn't fool his partner and did fool declarer who took the trick with the ace and led the five of clubs. Peter hopped right up with the ace and led the deuce of diamonds.

Peter knew South would go right up with dummy's ace. South did just that and proceeded to cash dummy's top clubs in order to discard that same queen of diamonds. Then South led a trump from dummy.

Alan ducked and South was in with the king. He led a heart with every intention of finessing dummy's 10. After all he was sure that Peter's original heart lead had been from the jack.

At this point the hand collapsed. Peter ruffed and led a fourth club. Alan ruffed with the ace of trumps while poor South discarded a heart. Not that it did him any good. Alan led back a heart and Peter was sure to score the setting trick with his jack.

A New Jersey reader wants to know why a bid of three notrump that counts 100 doesn't outrank a bid of four clubs that counts 80.

The answer is that since the invention of contract in 1925 the bid for the greater number of tricks has always been the winning bid. Between bids for the same number the rank is notrump, spades, hearts, diamonds and clubs.

Ann Landers

Skinheads have right to beauty

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to protest about the lady whose letter appeared recently criticizing us baldies for trying to spread our few remaining strands of hair across an open expanse of bare head.

Is that lady ready to file an affidavit that she is not disguising a flat bosom with a padded bra, that she is not holding in flabby hips with a tight girdle, that she isn't putting black pencil on a mole and trying to pass if off as a "beauty mark," or that she doesn't have a number of other physical imperfections which she tries to minimize somewhat?

We skinheads have a right to pretend that our few remaining strands of hair make us look less bald, if properly fluffed and distributed. it is difficult enough to live such a charade without being constantly reminded that we are not fooling anyone but ourselves.

When the critics stop trying to hide their liabilities or disguise them as assets, I'll cut off my silly flap of hair. — Bald Is Beautiful Or A.S.F. In Chicago

Hello, Beautiful: You just hang on to that silly flap of hair and drape it any way you please. It's your head. The same goes for women who "stuff with cotton what God's forgotten." I'm in favor of people dealing with their "inadequacies" in any manner that makes them feel better. But men who "drape" their hair should be aware that bending, excessive activity or getting caught in a high wind could easily blow their cover.

Dear Ann Landers: Why don't the anti-abortion people accept the fact that the best way to reduce the number of abortions in this country is by educating teenage girls so they won't get pregnant?

I just read a report called "11 Million Teenagers" by the Alan Guttmacher Institute in New York. The report said there are at least 11 million sexually active teenagers in the United States and pregnancies among this group are "epidemic." Will you please put these facts before the American people:

Babies born to teen mothers are two to three times more likely to die in their first year than babies born to mothers in their 20s.

The death risk for teen mothers is 60 per cent higher than that for mature women.

Pregnancy is the common cause of young women dropping out of school.

Teenage mothers face a much greater risk of unemployment, poverty, welfare dependency than mature mothers.

Teenage marriages are two to three times more likely to fail than those contracted by couples in their 20s.

Teen mothers are likely to have larger families than mature mothers and are less able to cope with their children.

Thank you for your cooperation, Miss Landers. — A Concerned Citizen In Corpus Christi

Dear Concerned: At the risk of boring my readers to death I will say it again. Information is good. Ignorance is bad. To assume that giving teenagers "the facts" will encourage experimentation is nonsense. They are experimenting WITHOUT the facts — and THAT'S dangerous.

Lindbergh project

Gen. James H. Doolittle holds a brochure with photo of Charles A. Lindbergh during a kick-off ceremony Tuesday in New York's Madison Square Garden to raise funds to establish a Charles A. Lindbergh Memorial Fund. Doolittle is co-chairman of the fund committee. The fund will award Lindbergh fellowships and grants to young people. (UPI)

Link possible in K.C. slayings

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Police say they are seeking possible links between two gangland-style slayings here within three days.

Harold D. Bowen, 35, who had a record of numerous arrests, was shot in the eye and the neck early Tuesday by four or five masked men as he sat in a bar in the city's midtown area.

His death followed that of John F. Amaro, 53, who was gunned down in his car in the garage of his home on the city's north side.

Amaro had been known to associate with members of organized crime in Kansas City.

"We're working the homicides together," Ken Riddell, a Metro Squad spokesman said. "We hope to come up with something."

He added:

"All the leads we're getting we're going out and finding ourselves. The people we're dealing with are a little bit reluctant in talking to us."

Riddell said the gunmen who shot Bowen told occupants of the bar to lay on the floor. Those were the only words spoken as the men walked up to a booth where Bowen was sitting and blasted away.

Police reported finding two shotguns six blocks from the bar later Tuesday. They were being analyzed to see if they were used in the slaying.

Officers found two sawed-off shotguns near the scene of the Amaro shooting Saturday.

Associates told police that an attempt was made on Bowen's life last November when someone attempted to place a bomb in his car.

The attempt backfired, police said, when a blasting cap exploded as the bomb was being attached to the car, possibly injuring the persons installing the device.

Police have asked area hospitals to check their records for anyone who might have been treated for such an injury on or soon after Nov. 17.

It was on Nov. 17 that the body of John Brocato, another person known to associate with organized crime figures, was found in his car in a parking lot at Kansas City International Airport.

He had been strangled.

Chinese chose Soviets as top foe, paper says

HONG KONG (AP) — A report by the late Chinese Premier Chou En-lai indicates China decided to get along with the United States because only one superpower should be portrayed as its worst enemy and the Soviet Union was chosen, the South China Morning Post said Wednesday.

The English-language Hong Kong newspaper said it had copies of two classified reports smuggled out of China that analysts had declared genuine. The conservative daily said the reports were prepared by Chou at the direction of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

In a 1973 report, the paper said, Chou quoted Mao as saying, "We must not fight two-sidedly; it is better to fight one-sidedly. (Thus) of the two world hegemonic powers, there must be one appearing as our most immediate enemy. Now the United States has dropped to No. 2 position."

The report conceded, "We cannot propose to unite with the United States to oppose the Soviet Union, though we share the same views with the United States on certain issues," the paper said.

Although Chou died in January 1976 and Mao nine months later, analysts said the report still has great bearing on Peking's stand in coping with the two superpowers and its outlook on the international situation.

U.S. destroying vitality of economy, some contend

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Every so often there erupts a spirited surge of investing that for a brief while creates a lot of excitement and arouses hopes for a new era of economic growth.

But then a somber and perhaps more realistic mood descends on the hopes and shoulders of the overly optimistic and then everyone agrees the excitement was just a little steam being vented.

Stock market investors refrain from heavy commitments to corporate growth. Corporations themselves decline to make capital commitments and seek to keep stockholders happy through dividend increases.

Individuals who once had dreams of a second home now build their bank accounts instead, or else search the art and antique markets, satisfied to enjoy some little bit now in place of a great deal later on.

And the National Association of Manufacturers howls; certain economists warn of dreadful consequences; and the news media run stories of the country going down the drain "like Britain."

For millions of Americans an economic nightmare is developing: In their view the United States is killing the vitality that brought it at one time the highest material standard in the world, smothering it in big government.

The causes might be debatable, but the facts seem to document the claims that the current American mood is less than daring in regard to future growth.

In the stock market, the number of individual participants is believed to be still dropping. In 1970 they numbered 30,850,000; in 1975, just 25,270,000.

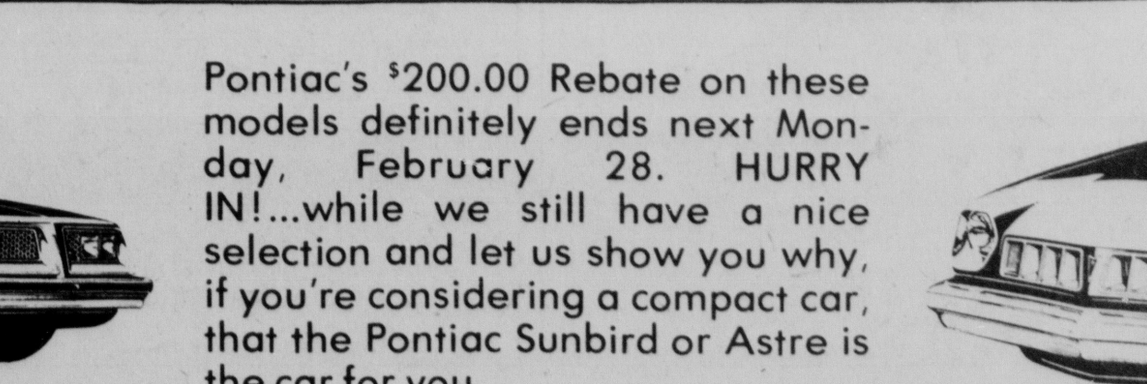
MERCURY MARQUIS

"Ride-Engineered by Lincoln-Mercury"
Full-size, six-passenger comfort.

Mercury Marquis ... big, smooth and roomy. With everything you want in a full-sized car. Deep in luxury with sumptuously appointed interiors. This year, dare to compare. Come to where the big cars are. At the sign of the cat.



Elegantly trimmed interiors match that of car models that are much more expensive. Compare the quiet ride that Ford has made famous, with the looks of European autos, yet priced for economy.

ASTRE 2-DR. COUPE

2901 S. Limit David Malmo Motors, Ltd. 826-6212

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

What causes bad breath?

Dear Dr. Lamb — My daughter is 24 and has had bad breath for several years. None of the products on the market seem to help for very long.

When she had a check-up with her doctor she asked him about this but he couldn't seem to find out what is causing this.

She has a bit of a weight problem so she watches her diet but she says she has no problem with her bowels, which sometimes happens when people don't eat the right food. I am wondering if you have any solution to this problem?

Dear Reader — Bad breath is a symptom, not a diagnosis. It is also very common. Unfortunately some people have it and are unaware they are offensive to others.

Your daughter was correct in asking her doctor about it and I am sorry she didn't get more help. It is also true that the available mouthwashes are of limited help. They just mask the odor temporarily and do not do anything to correct the cause.

The cause can be from the teeth. This may be from infected pockets around the roots that a person cannot clean out himself. A low grade infection is present along with decaying material. This is pyorrhea and it needs to be treated by a dentist. So, one thing a person with bad breath should do is see the dentist to correct any existing dental problems.

Beyond that the problem may be a low grade infection in the sinuses. As the air flows through the nose or back of the throat it may pick up unpleasant odors from such infections.

Mouth breathing may cause bad breath. The normal secretions in the back of the throat may dry up and this may allow bacteria to grow there that create an odor.

Chronically infected tonsils may be a source of bad breath. Any significant infection can release unpleasant odors. However, if the tonsils are not infected, taking them out will not help a bad breath problem.

Beyond the teeth, throat, nose and sinuses there are possible problems with the lungs. Any infection of the lungs, such as chronic lung disease, can cause bad odors that pass out of the lung with each breath.

The lungs are a major source of odors. Remember that the odor of alcohol on a person's breath comes from the alcohol vapors being released from the blood going into the lungs and into the air that the person exhales. This is the basis for the breath test for alcohol consumption.

You can breathe out the odor of any chemical from the body. A person with diabetic acidosis will have an odor to the breath similar to alcohol because chemicals of incomplete metabolism (ketones) are released from the blood into the air. Similarly chemicals from liver disease may cause the breath to have a particular "fruity" odor.

My advice to everyone who has a breath problem is to have a medical and dental evaluation. The causes of this social problem are many and some are more important than just having a socially embarrassing problem.

Feds go underground to bust bikers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They were some of the raunchiest outlaw bikers around. They toted pistols, had sinister patches on grease-crusted denim vests and rode chopped Harley-Davidsons.

They hung out with the likes of the Hell's Angels, Hessians, Misfits, Scorpions and Mongrels — and they liked to mix their "reds" with cheap wine.

But they were federal treasury agents who would rather bust an outlaw than roar along the roadways with one.

As part of the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms' nationwide "Omega" program, these agents were assigned to infiltrate outlaw bikers dealing in drugs, guns and explosives.

The program, from 1973 until early 1975, reportedly involved about 25 agents, including 10 in California. It led to numerous convictions and reams of intelligence on renegade motorcycle gangs.

One of the former agent-outlaws recently agreed to discuss the program on the condition that neither he nor the gang be named. We'll call the agent "Dirty Charley" and the gang the "Mad Hatters."

Charley said that the program started with four men and $4,000 for four bikes and that they decided to avoid anything illegal in other clubs' initiations by forming their own gang.

"We made up club business cards and passed them around to every drunken or wasted biker we stumbled upon," he said.

"We made ourselves the dirtiest bunch you ever saw in your life. When we changed our oil, we painted our jackets with oil and let them dry in the sun. We even had to wear long underwear to keep the gas and oil on our clothing from blistering our skin."

In early 1973, the Hatters drove a camper to New Orleans, pulling a trailer with their choppers, and went straight to a biker bar.

"Immediately people start asking, 'Who are those Mad Hatters?' But, all of a sudden one guy comes forward and produces one of our courtesy cards and starts rapping ... We were in."

The Mad Hatters eventually rode their way back to California, set up a biker pad and melted into the outlaw scene, often facing danger.

"Our surveillance people could watch us only up to a point," the 6-foot-2 agent recalled. "One time, the four of us wound up with 500 bikers."

The agents used a clever ruse to avoid suspicion when real outlaws offered drugs or women.

"We had a pharmacist friend make placebos. They even tasted bitter like Seconal but were just bicarbonate of soda. When we got offered drugs we'd say no and that we had our own. We'd dump a sock full of these placebos into a jug of wine. It would fizzle and dribble down our beards — it looked so bad nobody wanted to touch the stuff.

"They thought we were the meanest people on earth."

The Hatter's act apparently worked; two members of other clubs begged to join the gang. They were initiated blindfolded, with 20 law enforcement officers playing club members from out of state.

"There were crooks and agents riding together," Charley said.

He said he drove home to his wife many nights, taking circuitous routes to avoid someone following. But his neighbors became alarmed at his loud chopper and scruffy appearance and their "improvement association" petitioned him to move.

The club grew to seven members, plus a deputy sheriff brought in to handle the narcotics busts, normally not Treasury's purview.

"We carried guns and were arrested several times," Charley said. "Our cover people bailed us out. The more times you're arrested, the better you're liked."

The agent said he was in a half dozen fights and became so trusted that a member of the rival Axemen asked him to kill someone for $500.

"I said I wouldn't touch it for less than $5,000. At a later date, the same guys were arrested by San Diego area authorities for a murder," the agent recalled.

Charley said his two years underground brought out his first grey hairs and left him with a dislocated shoulder from a bike accident. He also said his home life was severely disrupted.

"I enjoy riding motorcycles, but this wasn't relaxation," he said. "We were keyed up all the time. It was two years before I could relax again."

Cat turns 30— 180 for humans

PLYMOUTH, Ind. (AP) — Cats may have nine lives, but a specimen here is taking her time with the first one.

Katherine Garn says her pet, Christie Bell, is 30 years old, and Plymouth veterinarian Robert Lindsey backs up the story.

For a cat to live to be 30 is like a human living to 180, Dr. Lindsey said. Understandably, Christie Bell has begun slowing down. She quit climbing trees and chasing birds last year, and is troubled with a slight case of rheumatism.

She also didn't get to be honored by her descendants. Soon after she wandered into Mrs. Garn's yard on Christmas Eve, 1947, Christie Bell was neutered.
